VOL. XVIII.....NO. 5443. NEW-YORK, THURSDAY, MARCH 4, 1869. PRICE FOUR CENTS.

WASHINGTON.

A Day of General Excitement at the Capital.

The City Crowded with Visitors from All Parts.

Increased Curiosity Regarding Gen. Grant's Cabinet.

The Halls of Congress Crowded with Interested Spectators.

A Rush of Business and Evening Sessions in Both Houses.

Special Dispatches to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, March 3.

That Washington is overflowing to-day with a great multitude of visitors is a feeble expression in view of the actual facts. The trains have continued to bring still greater crowds all day, until the hotels, the Avenue and the Capitol are one sea of curious, anxious, struggling and good-natured humanity. The city is to-night putting on its outward garb for to-morrow, and decorations and banners already float from flagstaff, roof-top and balcony, in all quarters. The telegrams to the hotels announce still other crowds coming, and by to-morrow morning the pressure will have reached its climax. The Capitol was the great centre of attraction, as a matter of course, and its corridors and passages were choked up with surging crowds of eager sight seers. The dull business routine of the two Houses was witnessed by hundreds who had never witnessed it before, and the galleries were filled from morning until evening with well-dressed strangers, whose presence is felt by the weary workers here as though it were a fresh inspiration. The marked feature of the inaugural visitors thus far, is their highly refined and respectable character. People of wealth and high social position seem to predominate, and the number of politicians and office-seekers is far below the average on such occasions. Events culminate to-morrow, and the promise to-night is one of success and brilliancy.

Cabinet matters begin to assume a little more definite shape. The same degree of speculation and rumor still prevails, but there have some few intimations transpired to-day that almost warrant a positive prediction as to some of the men. GEO. S. BOUTWELL, of Massachusetts, is conceded to be to-night by some of Gen. GRANT's most confidential friends the selection for Secretary of the Treasury. Gen. JOSEPH HOLT and Hon. JAMES F. WILSON are two other names which there seems little reason to doubt will be in the list. These three are regarded to-night as reasonably certain. Mr. GRISWOLD for Secretary of the Navy is also looked upon by some as Gen. GRANT's choice. Gov. DENNISON, of Ohio, will not go into the Cabinet, and Ohio will have no member. Gen. SCHOFIELD's name will not be sent in with the others. That seems to be decided. The following slate is to-night receiving the sanction of the best informed judges in Washington:

Secretary of State, HAMILTON FISH.
Secretary of the Treasury, GEO. S. BOUTWELL.
Secretary of War, JOHN M. SCHOFIELD.
Secretary of the Interior, JAMES F. WILSON.
Secretary of the Navy, JOHN A. GRISWOLD.
Postmaster-General, JOSEPH HOLT.
Attorney-General, Mr. BREWSTER, of Philadelphia.

The most successful effort to draw Gen. GRANT out on the Cabinet question occurred to-day. It was accomplished by NAST, the artist. He un dertook to depict the humors of the Cabinet mystery by representing GRANT as disclosing the Cabinet by shaking seven cats out of a bag, in presence of a curious crowd. The cats are all out, but NAST was brought to a sudden stop by being unable to put heads on them. This morning he called at headquarters, and sent his pencil and drawing to GRANT, with a polite request that he would finish it. Gen. GRANT laughed heartily at the picture, and informed Mr. NAST that he would finish it on Friday at noon. This, therefore, is a positive promise that there will be no delay in the announcement.

MR. COLFAX'S RESIGNATION.

During the delivery of Mr. COLFAX's speech resigning the Speakership, the galleries were crowded, and almost every member of the House was in his seat. Large numbers of the members elect were also present on the floor. The crowd in the galleries was so great that several ladies fainted. Few of those who arrived after 9 o'clock could gain admission to the hall. Mr. COLFAX read his speech from the manuscript, much to the disappointment of those familiar with his easy and graceful style of delivery. The precautionary measure of writing out his speech had been taken probably for fear his memory might prove treacherous. Many believed when he unfolded his manuscript that they were to hear some important disclosures of future policy, but there were no political expressions in the speech except of a very general character. At the allusion to the right of people to govern, and the extension everywhere of the principle that all Governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed, FERNANDO WOOD turned in his seat and looked at BROOKS with the slightest trace of a satirical smile on his face, but received no response from his colleague. To the expressions of absence of all unkindly feelings, the assertion that the fact that his rulings had not been reversed, Judge WOODWARD and others of the opposition were observed to nod assentingly. At the conclusion of the speech Mr. COLFAX had handed his gavel to Mr. WILSON, of Iowa, descended from the chair, and was disappearing in the direction of his room before a hand was raised in applause. At length the Democrats began applauding, and a hearty and generous response was thus made. Much feeling was displayed, both by the House and Mr. COLFAX, and in his opening sentences the agitation of the Speaker was plainly apparent. Immediately after Mr. WILSON had taken the chair Judge WOODWARD, at the suggestion of several members of the Opposition, offered a resolution highly complimentary to the retiring Speaker.

ELECTION OF MR. POMEROY AS SPEAKER.

Mr. POMEROY, of New-York, was elected Speaker unanimously, the voices of the Democrats being easily distinguished voting aye. The election was purely complimentary, and, as Mr. POMEROY said in his speech, without the slightest political significance. He announced his intention to retire at the end of this session to private life. The business of the day did not seem to be in the least impeded by the change. The House rattled away at the Speaker's table, and got so far down the calendar that there is no danger of losing any important bills, so far as it is concerned. POMEROY's sharp, prompt tones ring through the hall, over and above all confusion, and his gavel comes down at every indication of disorder as readily as though he had always been in that chair.

THE NATIONAL UNION LEAGUE.

The Counsel of the National Union League of America, which has been in session here for the past two days, adjourned to-day. The attendance was very large, including delegates from all the unreconstructed States. The Chairman of the Mississippi delegation stated, in reviewing the condition of the State, that there was reason to hope that the Constitution would be carried at the next election, the Union element being largely increased. The Texas delegates represent that the Constitution framed by the late Convention is unsatisfactory to the Union men, as it fails to declare that the rights of citizenship conferred by it shall not be abridged or repealed, and that the rebel citizens strongly favor it. The North Carolina delegates represent the conservative element as gaining ground rapidly in their State, and say that if the new administration does not adopt a new and positive policy in the State, she will send no more loyal representatives to Congress. The Georgia Representatives say that the reason that the party elected so many colored men to office was less the fault of the colored men than the white Unionists, as few of the latter could be found to brave social ostracism for the sake of office. A committee of Southern members was appointed to prepare an address to the people of the country, setting forth the true condition of affairs in late rebel States. So great is the dread of social ostracism that it was resolved that the members of the Committee should not be required to sign the document, but append only the name of the League. They are, however, representative and reliable men. Gen. GEARY, of Pennsylvania, was unanimously elected President of the League. There was strong opposition to him by members of the League from his own State—old politicians who did not relish the idea of giving GEARY any additional political importance—and there was likelihood of his defeat, but Gen. NEGLEY, of the new school of Pennsylvania politicians, and a fellow-soldier of GEARY's, made a brief speech, eulogising him for his military services, and referring to his identification from the first with the principles of the Republican Party. The consequence was the election of Gov. GEARY without further opposition. THOMAS C. BAKER, of New-York, was elected National Secretary. From New-York the following were appointed on the Executive Committee: Messrs. George H. Van Cleft, Waldo Hutchings, William V. Alexander, George S. McWaters, and Jacob M. Patterson, Jr., with Volney Green and Joseph Reese from Brooklyn. The Council meets in the City of New-York in December next.

BUSINESS IN THE SENATE.

There were periods to-day during the morning session of the Senate when, from the reckless squandering of time in almost endless debate, with an immense amount of important business unfinished, no one would have supposed that it was the last day of the Fortieth Congress. Crowded galleries seemed to open the fountains of wordiness, if not oratory, and Senators appeared more than usually anxious to speak on this question and on that. Mr. SCHENCK's bill to strengthen the public credit has been passed by a majority after a debate which at one time looked as if it would last all day and kill other business. The Army Appropriation bill has been debated, amended and sent to a Conference Committee, the war claim of Massachusetts having been disallowed; a short Executive session has been held and the Civil and Miscellaneous Appropriation bill has been taken up. This is so far the record of the day. The galleries are crowded with spectators choking up the dozen door-ways and tailing out in long line into the corridors. The scene somewhat resembles that of the impeachment days. While an amendment of the Committee allowing the Sisters of Charity of Charleston, S. C., $20,000 compensation for the destruction of their convent during the war was being debated, GARRETT DAVIS interrupted Mr. HOWARD, who was making a severe attack on the Catholic Church by offering a resolution of thanks to Mr. WADE for his services as Presiding Officer of the Senate. The resolution was declared unanimously adopted by Mr. THAYER, who was in the chair. HENDRICKS and BUCKALEW followed, both deprecating the introduction of religious topics into the proceedings of the Senate. Mr. HOWARD alluded to the action of the Pope in writing the famous encyclical letter to the American Bishops, asking them to use their influence to effect a peace between the North and the South. BUCKALEW was eloquent, sharp and incisive in reply.

At a few minutes after 10 o'clock Mr. CONKLING interrupted the debate by offering the report of the Conference Committee on the Post Office Appropriation bill, which was concurred in immediately, and so far as the Senate was concerned another appropriation bill was finished. The vote was then taken on the claim, and it was rejected by two majority. An amendment of the Committee to purchase a portrait of Mr. LINCOLN for the White House was not agreed to. Then came an appropriation of $15,000 for the improvement of the Capitol grounds.

At 11 o'clock the galleries thinned out and business became a little brisker, but still the progress was slow. Mr. HARLAN presented an amendment to reimburse Iowa in the sum of nearly $300,000, which, at this writing, 11:20, is now under debate.

SENATE, MIDNIGHT.—The session dragged on slowly until 12 o'clock, when more than half the Senators were in the committee or cloak rooms. The claim of the State of Iowa was allowed by a vote of 19 to 18. Then followed several other amendments of less importance on which various actions were taken. The report of the Committee of Conference on the Army Appropriation bill has just been presented. It is ordered back on account of some mistake. The galleries are nearly empty, and there is very little of interest transpiring.

EVENING SESSION OF THE HOUSE.

The scene in the House to-night is one of rare and deep interest. The great number of strangers in the city caused the galleries to be filled at an early hour, and up to the present hour every available seat has been occupied, while the doorways are crowded with hundreds of others, who struggle for a glimpse of the law-makers at their work. The various halls and passages are thronged, while the illuminated rotunda gathers thousands of spectators, who gaze upon its wonders and its beauties in silent admiration.

There was a quorum present at the hour of reassembling. Mr. DAWES got the floor and put the House in excellent humor by several happy hits in a brief speech urging the passage of the joint resolution giving Messrs. MENARD and HUNT, the Louisiana contestants, the sum of $2,500 each, previously ordered by the House, but refused by the Committee on Accounts. He sarcastically appealed to the House not to let their prejudices against color lead them into doing an injustice to a man because his skin was black. This hit was received with great laughter from all sides, particularly from the Democrats. He then yielded, as he said, to his emaciated friend from Missouri, Mr. LOAN, (whose weight is 200 pounds avoirdupois.) After a spicy contest, in which Mr. WARD feelingly appealed to the House to begin the practice of economy in these, the last hours of the Fortieth Congress, the resolution passed by one majority.

The next contest was on a conference report on the Political Disabilities bill. This lasted nearly two hours, and the report was finally non-concurred in and another Conference was asked.

ELEVEN O'CLOCK.—The status of the several unfinished appropriation bills at this hour to-night was as follows: The Indian, Army, Legislative and Deficiency bills are all in Committee of Conference, with a very strong prospect that the Indian and Army bills will fall. The Deficiency bill is just finished in the Senate, and will probably get through during the night. The House does not want to sit all night, but the business of the Senate being so far behind it seems to be necessary. The Conference Committee on the Bank bill was in session all afternoon, and at one time there was a prospect of an agreement. But up to this hour the report has not been signed, and the bill will probably fail. The great hitch is on the distribution section.

ELEVEN-THIRTY P. M.—The House has just spent an hour in fillibustering, the Democrats trying, for some unknown purpose, to defeat the conference report on the Post Office Appropriation bill, but they have just been brought to a stand still by a resolution from BEAMAN, cutting off dilatory motions. The opposition are very weak to-night, not mustering enough to obtain the yeas and nays. Legislation drags in the House, because there are several bills on the Speaker's table which are objectionable to the opposition, and they impede progress by all sorts of parliamentary tactics. There is an indisposition on the part of the House to remain in session all night, but it seems imperatively necessary to do so if the Appropriation bills are to get through.

MIDNIGHT.—The House is still engaged on dilatory motions. The Democrats have succeeded in getting a call of the yeas and nays on a motion to adjourn, despite the paucity of their numbers. The Globe contract matter is up, and ELA moves to lay on the table the resolution transferring the matter to the Government Printer. The House is getting thin, and it is evident that there may be a call of the House needed before another hour passes. The galleries are well cleared out, though several hundred still hang on, and many will doubtless spend the whole night on the benches.

HUGH MCCULLOCH,
Secretary of the Treasury.

MR. SEWARD'S RETIREMENT FROM OFFICE.

The following correspondence has just taken place:

WASHINGTON, March 3, 1869.

To Hon. William H. Seward, Secretary of State:

The undersigned, officers in the Department of State, cannot allow the occasion of your retirement from the position of Secretary of State to pass without expressing their cordial approbation of the uniform and considerate kindness which you have manifested toward them while in the discharge of their humble duties. They feel that it would not be altogether proper and might even be deemed presumptuous in them to speak of the manner in which, during a period in the country's history of unexampled difficulties and danger, you have discharged the various and exacting duties of your high office. While they do not doubt, however, what on that point will be the verdict of the tribunal from which there is no appeal, they especially desire to bear testimony to the fact that neither the press of public cares nor the weight of private sorrows, the latter seemingly too heavy to be borne, have served to diminish the exercise on your part of that courtesy toward subordinates which renders official intercourse so gratifying and the discharge of official duties so pleasant. Earnestly hoping for their country's sake that your useful life may be prolonged, and for your own that it may be attended with every possible blessing, the undersigned subscribe themselves,

Your obedient servants.

Signed by W. HUNTER, JOHN H. HASWELL and the other employes of the Department.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
WASHINGTON, D. C., March 3, 1869.

GENTLEMEN: I hasten to acknowledge the kind letter which you have just laid upon my table. It gives me sincere pleasure to recognize among the names subscribed to it every loyal, capable, trustworthy and reliable officer whom I found in this Department when I entered it, with the exception of those who have voluntarily retired from the public service. It gives me equal pleasure to witness that there is not among the subscribers of the kind letter one person whom I cannot recommend for continued public service. A comparison between the list of subscribers and the official roll, as it stood when I entered the Department, and as it stood at various periods afterward, discloses the honorable and gratifying fact that, although the country has passed through a long and severe civil war, and has subsequently passed through many critical commotions, consequent on the restoration of peace, only two persons have been dismissed the service for disloyalty, two or three at most for incompetency, and none for bearing the confidence of the Government. Gentlemen, it would be as idle as it would be presumptuous for us to undertake to fix a standard for the popular appreciation of our own services. That will be the task of history, which delights in contemplating studious of the vicissitudes of nations; and that task can only be performed when we shall have ceased to be. Let us, therefore, be content for the present with claiming for ourselves and conceding to each other the best opinion that whatever may be the errors which history may at any time detect, these errors have been in all cases errors of judgment, and not of motive or purpose. In the name of the President of the United States I thank you all, and each of you, for the efficiency, fidelity, ability and courtesy with which you have performed your several tasks, and I pray God to have you all constantly, with your respective families and friends, in His holy keeping.

I am, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

To Messrs. W. HUNTER, B. C. CHEW, E. PENDLETON SMITH, GEORGE E. BAKER, H. S. CHILTON and others.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT RATIFIED IN WEST VIRGINIA.

Representative HUBBARD, of West Virginia, has received a dispatch from Wheeling announcing that the West Virginia Legislature has to-day ratified the Constitutional Amendment, the vote being in the House 22 to 19, and in the Senate 10 to 6.

SPANGLER AND ARNOLD PARDONED.

The President last night signed the pardons for SPANGLER and ARNOLD, convicted on charge of complicity in the assassination of President LINCOLN, and now at Dry Tortugas. With the death of O'LAUGHLIN, and the pardon of MUDD and those above named, there will soon be no more prisoners there connected with that tragedy. The father of ARNOLD, who lives in Baltimore, received his son's pardon to-day from the hands of the President. That for SPANGLER will also soon be forwarded to Florida. Other pardons were issued to-day and given to the delighted friends and relatives who had solicited the Executive clemency.

VISITORS TO THE WHITE HOUSE.

The Executive Mansion has been thronged during the entire day. It is estimated that at least 5,000 persons called during the day; the majority of them, however, being strangers actuated by a desire to view the different room of the Executive Mansion and the adjoining grounds. Many took formal leave of President JOHNSON. An interesting feature of the events of this afternoon was a visit to the President by a large number of officers of the navy and heads of bureaus of the Navy Department, headed by Secretary WELLES and Admiral JOSEPH SMITH. Here the leave-takings were of the kindest character. No army officers had called in a body up to 3 o'clock to-day.

At 2 o'clock to-day the entire Diplomatic Corps, consisting of foreign ministers, secretaries, attachés, together with the ladies of their families, visited the State Department and took leave there of the Secretary of State, and Assistant Secretary Mr. F. W. SEWARD.

They then proceeded from the State Department to the Executive Mansion, where they were severally presented by the Secretary of State to the President of the United States. The President addressed them as follows:

"On seeing you on this, the last occasion of our meeting, it affords me very great pleasure to have it in my power to say that nothing has transpired, that I know of, to disturb that good and cordial feeling which should exist between the Government and people of the United States, and the representatives of friendly nations. In parting with you after a varied, but most pleasant, mutual acquaintance I pray you all and each of you to accept my best wishes for your future welfare and happiness."

The President then turned, and giving his hand to each of the ladies, bade them a courteous farewell with an assurance of his best wishes for their future welfare and happiness.

Mr. BERTHENY, the senior member of the Diplomatic Corps, replied to the President, as follows:

"Mr. PRESIDENT: In behalf of the Diplomatic body, I give you thanks for the uniform courtesies and kindnesses which have attended our intercourse with the Government of the United States, and we tender you the best wishes for your individual happiness and for that of all the members and authorities of the Government."

The Diplomatic body then renewed their parting salutations to the Secretary of State, and retired to their respective homes.

FORTIETH CONGRESS.

THIRD SESSION.

SENATE....WASHINGTON, Wednesday, March 3.

The Senate having passed the Deficiency Appropriation bill at 2 o'clock this morning, adjourned until noon.

At 12 o'clock the Senate again met.

SYMPATHY WITH SPAIN.

Mr. SUMNER, from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, reported back the joint resolution expressing sympathy with Spain, with the recommendation that the Senate should nonconcur in the amendments of the House. The Senate refused to concur.

THE CASE OF MR. CORCORAN.

Mr. HARLAN, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, reported a joint resolution in relation to the lands and other property of W. W. CORCORAN in the District of Columbia, used by the Government during and since the rebellion. It instructs the Secretary of the Treasury to withhold all payment from Mr. CORCORAN until he shall have taken the test oath.

Mr. HOWARD understood that Mr. CORCORAN had abandoned his property here, and gone away to stay during the war. He also understood that Mr. CORCORAN had been a rebel sympathizer, and he wished to know why such a man should be paid at all.

On motion of Mr BAYARD, the yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. DAVIS said that Mr. CORCORAN was entitled to compensation for his property without being required to take such oath; and therefore he would not vote to impose the oath upon him.

THE PUBLIC CREDIT BILL.

Pending the vote, Mr. SHERMAN made a report from the Committee of Conference, on the bill to strengthen the public credit.

Mr. DAVIS addressed the Senate in opposition to concurring in the report of the Committee, and also in opposition to the general principle of the bill, denying that Congress had a right to declare the effect of previous legislation.

Mr. SHERMAN briefly explained the action of the Committee of Conference.

Mr. SPRAGUE, in behalf of the suffering industries of the country, earnestly protested against the passage of this bill—a measure better calculated than any other yet proposed to bring about the repudiation of the national debt, and certain to do so, if the people were true to themselves.

Mr. HENDRICKS did not think the bill improved by the action of the Conference Committee, and again urged the view that Congress has no right now to change the contract originally made between the people and the bondholders.

Mr. MORTON said that, although he was a member of the Committee of Conference, he had not signed the report, and could not vote for it because it proposed to make a new contract, for which there was neither necessity nor excuse.

Mr. WILLIAMS defended the bill as reported by the Committee, and insisted that, even if it were admitted that the five-twenty bonds might legally be paid in paper, yet this bill, as a measure of good policy, ought to be passed.

Mr. COLE opposed the bill.

Mr. WILLIAMS asked whether the Senator from California—the land of gold, where the people paid all their debts in coin—was in favor of paying the public debt of the United States in depreciated paper.

Mr. COLE replied that he was in favor of paying the public debt according to the terms of the contract under which it was incurred. If by the time the bonds should become due the United States should have resumed coin payments, the bonds would be paid in coin, but if they fell due before that time, they would not, and ought not, to be so paid.

Mr. SPRAGUE again expressed his opposition to the bill. It was a measure which would make capital higher, when it was already so high that no American industry within his knowledge could afford to employ it.

Mr. BUCKALEW said that without having the report of the Committee of Conference before them, Senators could not discuss its merits or judge of them intelligently, and thought it unwise to attempt to force the bill through under the circumstances.

The report of the Committee was then agreed to by a vote of yeas 31, nays 24.

TEXT OF THE BILL.

The following is the Public Credit bill as agreed to in the Committee of Conference:

Be it enacted, &c., That in order to remove any doubt as to the purpose of the Government to discharge all just obligations to the public creditors, and to settle conflicting questions and interpretations of the laws by virtue of which such obligations have been contracted, it is hereby provided and declared that the faith of the United States is solemnly pledged to the payment in coin or its equivalent of all the obligations of the United States not bearing interest, known as United States notes, and of the interest-bearing obligations of the United States, except in cases where the law authorizing the issue of any such obligation has expressly provided that the same may be paid in lawful money, or other currency than gold and silver; but none of said interest-bearing obligations, not already due, shall be paid or redeemed before maturity, unless at such time United States notes shall be convertible into coin at the option of the holder, or unless at such time bonds of the United States, bearing a lower rate of interest than the bonds to be redeemed, can be sold at par in coin. And the United States also solemnly pledges its faith to make provision, at the earliest practicable period, for redemption of United States notes in coin.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That any contract hereafter made especially payable in coin, and the consideration of which may be a loan of coin or sale of property, or the rendering of labor or service of any kind, the price of which, as carried into the contract, may have been adjusted on the basis of the coin value thereof at the time of such sale, or the rendering of such service or labor, shall be legal and valid, and may be enforced according to its terms; and on the trial of a suit brought for the enforcement of any such contract, proof of the real consideration may be given.

THE MASSACHUSETTS WAR CLAIM.

The morning hour having expired, the Army Appropriation bill came up as unfinished business.

Mr. HARLAN asked the Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations to yield the floor long enough to let the vote be taken on the joint resolution relative to the payment of W. W. CORCORAN, but Mr. CONNESS objected to the consideration of any business other than the Army Appropriation bill. Upon this bill the pending amendment was that offered by Mr. SUMNER providing for the payment of the interest claim of Massachusetts and Maine for advances made for the United States during the war of 1812 and 1815.

Mr. SUMNER had already modified his amendment so as to provide that the claim should be computed and paid according to the same rules and limitations applied in the case of the similar claim of Maryland.

Mr. GRIMES said the proposition as modified was no less objectionable than before, and he would vote against it in every form, and would even vote against the Army Appropriation bill rather than see this amendment passed.

Mr. CHANDLER and CAMERON appealed to Mr. SUMNER to withdraw the amendment and let the Appropriation bill be passed.

Mr. SUMNER said he had no desire to delay the bill. All he asked was that the opponents of his amendment would let the Senate vote on it.

Mr. SPRAGUE said that his own judgment, aided by the speech of the Senator from New-York, (Mr. CONKLING,) had convinced him that he should vote for the claim of Massachusetts. He defended New-England against the aspersions upon her conduct in the war of 1812. New-England had suffered and done more in that war than any other section, and the offence of Massachusetts was simply that she kept her soldiers at home where there was danger, and refused to let them go where there was none.

The amendment was then rejected—yeas 16, nays 26.

The Army Appropriation bill was then passed.

MR. CORCORAN TO BE PAID.

On motion of Mr HARLAN, the joint resolution relating to the claim of W. W. CORCORAN was then taken up and passed—yeas 34, nays 3.

NORMAN WIARD'S BILL.

Mr. NYE proposed to call up the bill for the relief of NORMAN WIARD, but

Mr. GRIMES objected, and said that the bill could not be properly considered before recess.

Mr. NYE said he thought the bill would not give rise to debate.

Mr. GRIMES said he was entirely familiar with the claim.

Mr. NYE was unable to see how that altered the nature of the claim.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

At 4:15 o'clock, on motion of Mr. CONKLING, the Senate went into Executive session.

The Senate, after coming out of Executive session, took a recess until evening.

EVENING SESSION.

Mr. SUMNER called up the joint resolution to carry into effect the decree of the United States Court of New-York in relation to a British steamer. Passed.

COURT OF LOUISIANA DECREES.

Mr. SUMNER moved to take up a joint resolution to carry into effect the decrees of the United States District Court of Louisiana in relation to a certain other British steamer; but

Mr. STEWART objected, and said he was opposed to compensating British subjects for losses incurred, no matter under what circumstances, during the late war, until Great Britain shall take some positive action for the payment of the Alabama claims.

MISCELLANEOUS APPROPRIATIONS.

The Civil and Miscellaneous Appropriation bill was then taken up.

Mr. CONKLING offered an amendment, which was agreed to, to enable the Secretary of the Treasury and the Postmaster-General to exchange the land bought by the United States for the site of the new Post Office in New-York City for the same or a greater quantity of land further up in the City Hall Park.

The amendment reported by the Committee on Appropriations giving the Sisters of Mercy, of Charleston, S. C., $20,000 in recognition of their services to Union prisoners during the late rebellion, gave rise to some discussion.

Mr. DRAKE opposed it because it was the professed business of these ladies to be charitable, and they ought not to be paid for it.

Mr. HOWARD opposed it, because he did not think it right to single out any particular class of benevolent ladies to be especially rewarded for their services to the Union soldiers; and if he were to discriminate in favor of any class it would not be in favor of members of the Catholic Church. He remembered, and the people remembered, the circular letter addressed by the Pope to Catholic Bishops of the United States, urging them to bring about peace, meaning that it should be brought about by the recognition of the independence of the Southern Confederacy. He remembered too that after that letter there were few enlistments of Catholics in the army, so that large bounties had to be offered to recruit the ranks. With a few brilliant and honorable exceptions, the influence of the Roman Catholic clergy had been against the Union, not to say in favor of the rebellion.

Mr. HENDRICKS was surprised that the Senator from Michigan (HOWARD) should make such an attack upon one of the Churches of the country; and to the best of his knowledge the statements of the Senator as to the few enlistments of Catholics in the army were incorrect in point of fact. He knew that in Indiana the number of Catholics who had enlisted in the Union army was very large. Neither was it true that the Catholic clergy had cast their influence against the Union. Every one remembered that the most distinguished Prelate of the Catholic Church, Archbishop HUGHES, had gone to Europe to use his influence in behalf of the Union, at the call of President LINCOLN, and had there, with another distinguished Bishop of another Church, Bishop MCILVAINE, done much for the cause of the Union.

Mr. SAWYER advocated the appropriation, and called attention to the testimony of Gens. SHERMAN, SICKLES and GILMORE in regard to the great services of the Sisters of Charity of Charleston to the suffering Union soldiers.

Mr. BUCKALEW said that the Pope, in the letter criticized by the Senator from Michigan, (HOWARD,) had expressed no opinion on either side of our civil war, but had, in accordance with his ecclesiastical character, urged the clergy of his Church to seek the restoration of peace.

After further discussion the amendment was rejected; yeas 20, nays 22.

A VOTE OF THANKS TO MR. WADE.

Mr. DAVIS—The present Congress will close to-morrow at noon. Before we separate I feel that I, personally, and the Senate have a debt to pay to our presiding officer. I therefore ask leave to present, with much real satisfaction, the following resolution, which I hope the Senate will receive with the same feeling that prompted me to offer it:

Resolved, That the thanks of the Senate are due, and they are hereby tendered, to Hon. BENJAMIN F. WADE, for the ability, impartiality and justice with which he has discharged the duties of presiding officer of the Senate during the time he has occupied the chair.

The resolution was adopted by a unanimous vote.

MR. LINCOLN'S PORTRAIT.

The amendment reported by the Committee to the Civil Appropriation bill, providing for the purchase of a portrait of President LINCOLN, to be placed in the White House, was agreed to.

Mr. HARLAN offered an amendment to reimburse Iowa for expenses in the war of the rebellion $229,848.

Mr. EDMUNDS raised the point of order that the amendment had not been reported from any Committee.

The President overruled the point of order.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CHANDLER offered an amendment appropriating $50,000 for the improvement of the mouth of the Mississippi. Agreed to.

Mr. MORRILL, of Vermont, offered an amendment providing for the purchase of the Washington Gas Light Company. Adopted.

Mr. WILSON, from the Committee on Conference on the Army Appropriation bill, made a report which was concurred in. The Civil Appropriation bill was then reported to the Senate and passed.

At 12:30 A. M., on motion of Mr. CONKLING, the Senate went into Executive Session.

The Senate came out of Executive session at 1:30 o'clock.

The Committees of Conference on the Legislative Appropriation bill and the Deficiency Appropriation bill made reports, which were concurred in.

Mr. WILLIAMS reported from the Committee of Conference on the bill to remove political disabilities that they were unable to agree.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN called up his bill relating to naturalization, upon which he made an argument, but without acting upon it, the Senate again at 2 o'clock A. M. went into Executive Session.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

The House met at 10 o'clock with an unusually large attendance of members, and with the galleries crowded to their utmost capacity.

After prayer a message was received from the Senate stating that that body had passed the Legislative and the Post Office Appropriation bills.

On motion of Mr. SPALDING the amendments were non-concurred in, and a Committee of Conference asked for.

THE SPEAKER'S RESIGNATION.

The SPEAKER then, in the midst of profound silence, rose and delivered his farewell address to the House, prefacing his remarks with an announcement that he had asked the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. WILSON,) to preside as Speaker pro tem. until the election of his successor.

Mr. COLFAX spoke as follows:

GENTLEMEN:—The opening of the legislative day, at the close of which I must enter upon another sphere of duty, requires that I should make the formal act of the office which, by your kindness and confidence, I have held, to take effect on the election of a Speaker for the brief remainder of this session. The parting word among friends must be spoken always a regretful one; but the farewell which takes me from this hall, in which so many years have been spent, excites in me emotions which it would be useless to attempt to conceal. The fourteen years during which I have been associated with the Representatives of the people here, have been full of eventful legislation, of exciting issues and of grave decisions, vitally affecting the entire Republic. All these, with the accompanying scenes, which so often reproduced in this arena of debate, the warmth of feeling of our antagonizing constituencies, have passed into the domain of history. And I but refer to them to express the joy which apparently is showed by the mass of our countrymen, that the storm-cloud of war which has so long darkened our political horizon at last passed away, leaving our imperiled Union saved; and that, by the decree of the people, more powerful than Presidents or Congresses or armies, liberty was proclaimed throughout the land to all the inhabitants thereof. But I cannot leave you without one word of rejoicing over the present condition of our Republic among the nations of the earth. With our military power and almost illimitable resources magnified by the war that developed them; with our rapidly augmenting population, and the welcome at our gates to the oppressed of all other climes; with our vast and increasing agricultural, mechanical, manufacturing and mineral capacities; with our vantage on the two great oceans of the globe, and our almost completed Pacific Railroad uniting these opposite shores, and becoming the highway, the United States of America commands the respect among the Powers of the world which insures the maintenance of all its citizens from oppression or injustice abroad. Nor is this all. The triumphal progress of free institutions here has had its potential influence beyond the sea. The right of the people to govern, based on the sacred principle of our revolution that all Governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed, is every where advancing, not with slow and measured steps, but with a rapidity that within a few years has been so signally illustrated in Great Britain, Spain, Italy, Prussia, Hungary and other lands. May we not hope that by the moral but powerful force of our example fetters may everywhere be broken, and that some of us may live to see that happy era when slavery and tyranny shall no more be known throughout the world from the rivers to the ends of the earth. I cannot claim that, in the share I have had in the deliberations, and the legislation of this House, as a member and an officer, I have not erred, for who was wisest and best, in word and in act, for none of us are infallible. But that I have striven to perform faithfully every duty, and that, devoted, as all know, to principles that I have deemed correct, the honor and glory of our country have always been paramount and above all party ties, I can conscientiously assert. And that I have sought to mitigate rather than to intensify the asperities which the collision of opposing parties so often evoke, must be left to my fellow-members to verify. In the responsible duties of the last six years, I have endeavored to administer the rules you have enacted for your guidance, both in letter and in spirit, with an impartiality unbiassed by political associations or antagonisms. And if may be pardoned for the expression of gratification, that while no decision has been reversed, there has been no appeal, sometimes taken as they are by a minority as a protest against the power under the rules of a majority, which has ever been decided by a strictly party vote. If, in the quickness with which a presiding officer here is often assailed to rule, hour after hour on parliamentary points, and in the performance of his duty to protect all members in their rights, to advance the progress of public business and to preserve order, any word has fallen from my lips that has justly wounded any one, I desire to withdraw it unreservedly. I leave this hall with no feeling of unkindness to any member with whom I have been associated in all the years of the past, having earnestly tried to practice that lesson of life which commands us to write our enmities on the sand, but to engrave our friendships on the granite. But the last word cannot longer be delayed. I bid farewell to the faithful and confiding constituency whose affectionate regard has sustained and encompassed me through all the years of my public life; farewell to the hall which, in its excitements and restless activities, so often seemed to represent the throbbings and the intense feelings of the national heart; and finally, fellow-members and friends, with sincere gratitude for the generous support you have always given me in the difficult and often complex duties of the chair, and with the warmest wishes for your health, happiness and prosperity, one and all, I bid you farewell.

As the Speaker closed his address and retired from the chair there was a hearty outburst of applause, commencing in the galleries and extending to the members on the floor.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa, having taken the chair as Speaker pro tem.,

Mr. WOODWARD rose and said that at the instance of his political friends and as expressive of his own feelings, he offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the retirement of Hon. SCHUYLER COLFAX from the Speaker's Chair after a long and faithful discharge of its duties, is an event in our current history which would cause general regret were it not that the country is to have the benefit of his matured talents and experience in the higher sphere of duty to which he has been called by a majority of his countrymen. In parting from our distinguished Speaker, the House records with becoming sensibility its high appreciation of his skill in parliamentary law, of his promptness of administering the rules and facilitating the business of the body, of his urbane manners, and of the dignity, and impartiality with which he has presided over the deliberations of the House. He will carry with him into his new field of duty, and throughout life the kind regards of every member of this Congress.

The resolution was put and adopted unanimously, and an engrossed copy of it, to be signed by the officers of the House, was ordered to be communicated to Mr. COLFAX.

MR. POMEROY ELECTED SPEAKER.

Mr. DAWES then, by unanimous consent, moved that Mr. POMEROY, of New-York, be declared duly elected Speaker of the House, in place of Mr. COLFAX, resigned.

The resolution was agreed to unanimously, and Mr. POMEROY was, amid general applause

GRIFFITH GAUNT.

Proceedings in the Action for Libel by Charles Reade Against the "Round Table."

The proceedings in this case were continued yesterday, before his Honor Judge CLERKE, in the Supreme Court.

Mr. Gerry said he wished to read the article published in No. 58 of the Round Table, published on the 15th October, 1866. In the same number of that paper the article referred to it in very strong terms, and was headed "An English Bully." He proposed to read this as showing the animus of the defendants.

Mr. Sewell—I object to the admission of this article on the ground that anything tending to an aggravation of the original libel—if that is the light in which counsel wishes to have it put—is not admissible. I think if his Honor would glance over the article before it is read, he would see whether it is admissible or not. The article was published months after the alleged libels, and if it is sought to introduce it as an aggravation of the offence, it is not admissible here. The decisions upon this point are very strong. It has been decided in the court of last resort that no other certain admissions made by him as to the character of his work. They propose to rely on those admissions either as a justification of their previous libels or in mitigation of damages. Now I want to show to the jury that in the very paper in which this letter is contained appear certain comments of the editors on this letter, and I want to read those comments in order to show what the animus of the writers was with regard to this letter. I wish to show that the animus that instigated those original libels still remained with the writers.

After some further discussion the Judge decided that the reading of the article in question might be permitted.

Mr. Gerry then proceeded to read the article.

The counsel for the defence then proceeded with the examination of their witnesses.

Richard Henry Stoddart, examined by Mr. Sewell, deposed: I have been an author and literary man for about twenty years; I know it is sometimes customary for authors to employ assistants in the production of novels.

Q.—In the literary world will you be kind enough to state whether if an author has employed other persons to assist him in writing a book, and then passed it off as his own without acknowledgment of the assistance so derived, it would not be damaging to his reputation to do so?

Mr. Gerry—One moment if you please. I have no objection to their putting just as many questions as they please, but they have not shown that this gentleman is an expert.

Mr. Sewell—I had supposed from the well-known position of the gentleman, my friend, that he would have known of Mr. Stoddart's productions.

Mr. Gerry—Ah! That just bears out my objection. They place a poet on the stand and then ask him to pass upon novels.

His Honor—The objection is overruled.

Mr. Sewell repeated the question.

Witness—I think it would depend something on the kind of work; in some cases it would be injurious to an author's reputation, in others it would not.

Mr. Gerry—During the time you have mentioned you have been engaged in literary pursuits, have you written any novels?

Witness—I have written several magazine stories, but no novels.

Counsel—Do you know of any cases in the literary world in which an author employed another to write a book for him, and then published the book over his signature, without mentioning the name of the person employed by him? On its becoming known, would it do any damage to his character?

Witness—It seems to me you have several questions together.

Mr. Gerry—I think not. It is a hypothetical case. Question repeated.

Witness—I don't know of such a case.

Henry Sedley—I am present editor of the Round Table; I have also exercised the profession of an author for the last seven or eight years; I have written prose stories, novels, as they are called; it is sometimes customary for novel writers to employ assistants to write for them; I know of such things being done; if an author engages an assistant and afterwards publishes the book without mentioning the assistant's name, I should say it would, in some instances, injure his reputation; the practice of having literary assistants in novel writing has not prevailed very long; to my knowledge only within the past few years.

Q.—Do you know of any eminent author who has employed persons to assist him? A.—I have heard the practice imputed to Mr. Dickens, but I could not swear of my own knowledge; it would be very hard to give evidence of actual knowledge in such matters.

Q.—Is it the general impression that Mr. Dickens employs men to write his novels? A.—I have been told that other persons wrote those stories which are known as "Dickens' Christmas Stories;" in fact the statement was very widely circulated that Mr. Dickens and his friends felt called upon to refute it; at first, the story was denied; but afterward it was in part admitted.

Mr. Sewell—That Dickens did not write them?

Witness—Yes. One or two of the gentlemen who wrote them told me that they have so written them.

Mr. Gerry—I have but one question to ask. Were you editor of the Round Table on the 13th of October, 1866?

Witness—I was.

Mr. Gerry—That's all.

Mr. Richard Grant White recalled, and cross-examined by Mr. Gerry, deposed: I know nothing about Mrs. Henry Wood personally; and not much about her reputation as an author; I have read one or a chapter or two of her works; her general reputation is that of a writer of sensation novels, which are objectionable in point of taste rather than in point of morals.

Mr. Gerry—I understand you have read Griffith Gaunt?

Witness—I have.

Mr. Gerry—Did you know of its circulation in families?

Witness—I did, as one knows of the circulation of books generally.

Mr. Gerry—Has it been admitted in your own family?

Witness—It has; I gave it to my wife and sister to read, after having carefully read it myself.

Mr. Gerry here read long extracts from the alleged libels, and said to the witness: Assuming such articles to have been published in a paper of which 5,000 copies were circulated, what effect would such articles have on the character of a writer so assailed?

Mr. Whitney objected, and his Honor thought the question not admissible.

Witness (examination continued)—I have heard of cases in which authors had been charged with fixing their names to the writings of other persons, but I cannot remember the particulars; Miss Braddon's case is what I refer to; a bookseller published a book here as Miss Braddon's, called What Is This Mystery? It is not certain that she did not write it; but she resented the imputation; of course the passing off of the book of an obscure author as that of an eminent writer would be very scandalous; the effect of such attacks on the credit of a writer and on the future sale of his works would depend very much upon the character of the publication making the charge.

David Symes—I am a publisher at No. 128 Nassau-street; I published an edition of the novel of Griffith Gaunt; two days after Tinker & Fields published their edition; I published an edition of sixty thousand copies of the novel; those copies all sold; it was the largest circulation of any novel our firm ever published.

Mr. Gerry—Where did you get the copy from which to set up the novel of Griffith Gaunt?

Witness—From the Atlantic Monthly, except the last portions of the story; those I got from Ticknor & Fields' edition; it came into New-York on the Saturday afternoon, and I had the edition of the novel out by Monday morning.

Mr. Gerry—What did you pay Mr. Ticknor for the novel?

Witness—Nothing.

Mr. Gerry—You gave him no remuneration whatever?

Witness—Not a cent.

Mr. Gerry—Did you pay Reade, the author, anything?

Witness—Nothing.

Mr. Whitney then summed up the case for the defendants.

Mr. William D. Booth announced his willingness to sum up the case for the plaintiff.

His Honor said he thought it would be advisable to adjourn till to-day, when the entire case could be finished, and go to the jury.

The Court then adjourned till ten o'clock this morning.

Board of Education.

The New-York Board of Education met last evening, President R. L. LARREMORE in the chair.

A motion to appropriate the sum of $75,000 for the enlargement of Primary School building No. 1, in Ludlow-street, was discussed at length, and finally tabled.

Commissioner WARREN presented a communication, addressed to him by the Society for the Protection of Destitute Roman Catholic Children, asking for a share in the distribution of worn-out school furniture. The matter was referred to the Committee on Buildings.

The sum of $24,000 was appropriated with which to purchase three lots on the northerly side of Fifty-fourth-street, near Sixth-avenue, upon which to erect a new building for the use of Primary School No. 40.

An appropriation of $55,000 was voted for the purchase of four lots of ground, and the buildings thereon, known as Nos. 326 to 332 Fifth-street, inclusive, on which to erect an edifice for a grammar and primary school combined.

The Finance Committee reported that the amount of school moneys to be apportioned for the year 1869, were as follows:

First, an amount equal to the State quota as reported in the estimate in November last, which was..... $394,814 80

Second—An amount equal to one-twentieth of one per cent. on the taxable property of the City..... 454,218 16

Total..... $849,032 96

The total average, as before stated, being $85,920. The amount to be apportioned, per scholar, is about $9 88.

The report was adopted and ordered to be printed.

It was resolved to hire a large brick building in Fifty-second-street, between Tenth and Eleventh avenues, for the use of a new primary school, at an annual rental of $2,000.

On recommendation of the Finance Committee the sum of $20,000 was appropriated for blasting rocks, and grading lots for a school site in West Fifty-seventh-street, in the Nineteenth Ward. The same Committee recommended that $18,000 be appropriated for the purchase of two lots of ground in Sheriff-street, for the extension of Primary School building No. 23, and the report was adopted.

The Board then adjourned until the 17th inst.

The New-York Sewerage System.

The Standing Committee on Public Health, of the Legislature, met yesterday at the Fifth-avenue Hotel, pursuant to a resolution introduced to the Assembly by Mr. KEEGAN, and adopted, authorizing an inquiry into the system of sewerage adopted and carried out by the Croton Board of this City. The following members of the Committee were present: Dr. W. M. Carpenter, of Madison County, Chairman; Dr. S. Mitchell, of Steuben; Dr. J. L. La Morse, of Sullivan; Dr. Gee. Cook, of Ontario; J. R. Allaben, of Kings, and A. E. Hasbrouck, of Ulster.

Robert L. Derrach, member of the Croton Aqueduct Board, was first examined by the Committee, and testified that the sewerage system was under the control of that Board, which was authorised by the law of 1865 to adopt such a system as they should think best; the system now presented by the Board consists of pipes graduated in size and so distributed as to effect, so far as possible, a complete drainage of the City; the Board regulates the size and material of the pipes connecting private dwellings, with the sewers, but the connection is made at the expense of the owner of each house; the pipes for the branch sewers are from twelve to eighteen inches in diameter; they are discharged into main or trunk sewers, which are built of brick and vary in size from four to eight feet in diameter (oval shaped,) according to the amount of drainage required; the sewers built by the Board under the new system are sufficiently large to carry off all refuse matter entering them either from the street or houses; the main sewers which discharge into the river are to extend, under the new system, out into the river to the water line established by the Harbor Commissioners; the contracts for building sewers are made by the Croton Board to the lowest bidder; the security for the performance of the contract, however, is determined by the Comptroller, which sometimes works badly in practice; probably about one in twenty of the contractors fail to fulfil their contracts; the old system of sewerage, previous to 1865, was in reality no system at all; the Croton Board merely built sewers where the Common Council directed, and directions to build were frequently given without any reference to the grade or the topography of the ground, and were sometimes impracticable or very expensive; obstructions from sewers always occur in large sewers insufficiently supplied with water; the sewer pipes used by the Board are made in Scotland; the right kind of pipes have not yet been made in this country; the earthen pipes now used require far less repairing than the old brick sewers; the pipes are purchased by the Board and sold to the contractors at a sufficient advance over the cost to cover the loss by breakage; if anything is left it is paid over to the Comptroller; it was found, by experience, to be necessary for the Board to purchase the pipe in order to have a supply on hand when wanted; it also to prevent the use of inferior or worthless pipe; the earthen-pipe sewers are, on an average, 35 per cent. cheaper than the old-fashioned brick sewers; the Board have no power to compel owners of houses to connect them with the sewer; the Board of Health have the power when they think the public health requires it; the Board considers a sewer necessary in every street in the City, and they aim to have them constructed in every street as soon as possible.

THEODORE WESTON, engineer in charge of sewers, explained by means of maps the system of sewerage adopted by the Croton Board, with the localities and size of a number of the mains and pipes.

GEO. S. GREEN, Chief Engineer of the Croton Board, was examined, and corroborated the statements made by Mr. DARAGH.

The Committee will meet again at 9 A. M. to-day, at the same place.

THE GAS MONOPOLIES.

The Investigation Before the Assembly Committee Continued—Enormous Dividends—Over Fifty Per Cent. Per Annum for the Stockholders of the New-York Gaslight Company.

The Assembly Committee charged with the investigation of the manner in which the gas companies of this City conduct their business, met again at 10 A. M. yesterday, at the St. Nicholas Hotel, and was in session all day. Many witnesses, who had been summoned, failed to make their appearance, and it was directed that they be brought before the Committee by compulsory process. Some of those that testified were reluctant. There were present of the Committee Mr. MITCHELL, Chairman, and Messrs. LA BAU BENDER, HODGES, BAKER, WEED and BERGEN.

Prof. Wurz, chemist, was first sworn. He testified that in his experience he had found that the further off from the works one goes, the weaker he finds the light; at the Metropolitan Gas Works the power of a burner is equal to sixteen candles, but the distance from the works increased the power decreased; he was of opinion that hydrate of lime was the best agent for the purification of gas without diminishing its illuminating power; one company in this City uses oxide of iron, but all the large companies use lime; good gas, as he defined it, should produce no decided odor when burning; it should not give forth the odor of creosote; it should not burn green; the excessive use of water in purifying gas is apt to destroy its illuminating power; the English standard of gas is about fourteen candles; in this City it is from sixteen to eighteen; in Boston they pretend to have eighteen-candle gas, but the witness did not know personally; it is not yet known which purifying process is the most economical; the hydrate of lime can always be obtained in any quantity, and is always reliable; it abstracts the injurious substances from the gas much more reliably than any other agent now known; there is a larger proportion of sulphur in gas purified by the iron process; in the gas of the Company which uses that process there was found to be forty-five grains of sulphur, whereas good gas should have no more than twelve; in all the large cities of England, at the time when the iron process was thought for a while to be superior, the authorities were appealed to to introduce this so-called improvement; on examination it was found that lime produced so much stench as to be very offensive and injurious to health; the iron process was then introduced by legislative authority, but under this process the gas was found to be so impregnated with sulphur as to be extremely unhealthy; now there is a very general movement throughout England to abolish the iron system and return to the lime; the witness had never had an opportunity to test the gas of the New-York Gas Company, (who use the iron process,) but had judged by the eye that their gas was inferior in illuminating power to that of the other companies; the proper manufacture of gas depends very materially on the quality of the coal; some coals produce more illuminating power than others; there is a bog Cannel coal, imported from Scotland, which is the best in use, although the Westmoreland coal of Pennsylvania is also very good; the witness considered that this City was as well lighted as any city that he knew of.

Mr. WEED made a motion that Prof. WURZ and two other chemists examine the gas and the works of the various companies in this City and Brooklyn, and report as soon as practicable to the Committee on the illuminating power of those gases. Prof. Wurz desired to know how long time would be allowed. The Committee finally limited him to two weeks.

Prof. Charles F. Chandler was next examined. He had examined several specimens of New-York gas, and had found that in many of them was there an excess of sulphur; he had found that the Manhattan gas had an illuminating power of fourteen candles in very cold weather, where gas passes through cold mains, it is apt to deposit a portion of its hydro-carbon oils, and it is thus diminished in quantity and illuminating power; in warm weather it absorbs these deposits, and thus increases its illuminating power; he had never had occasion to find fault with the gas of the Metropolitan Gas Company; the gas of the New-York Company is also of good quality, but he could not decide on the comparative merits of the various gases without a scientific examination; the average yield of gas per bushel of the largest gas companies, is about four and a half feet of gas to one pound of coal; these are the actual working figures of two companies; the experiments above alluded to were made some time last fall, at a distance of three blocks from the works; it was a mere incidental experiment and was not made with sufficient care to justify him in asserting that it was absolutely correct; there is a difference as to the best purifying process; the general belief is that the dry lime process is the best, although it gives rise to odors which are extremely unhealthy; the iron process, while perhaps not as perfect, certainly is much more healthy; the lime process, properly applied, does not reduce the illuminating power.

Mr J M Long, Superintendent of the Harlem Gas Company, was the next witness—The Company, he said, had received a few complaints as to the quality and quantity of the gas; the illuminating power of the Harlem gas he claimed to be equal to eighteen candles; he owned no stock in the Company, being merely the Superintendent; the complaints generally arose as to the amount of bills; these things are generally arranged without much delay; the manner in which the Company ascertains whether its agents are honest is to send out men to examine all cases of complaint; there had never, in his knowledge, occurred a case in which an agent of the Company had made out a bill by the average system, or without examining the metres; in the disarrangements to which metres are liable they are about quite as adverse to the Company's interests as to those of consumers; the Company loses as much as it gains by the variations in metres.

F. H. N. Newcombe, a shareholder in the New-York Gas Company, was the next witness. He owned ten shares, on which he received dividends amounting to 50 per cent. per annum; this dividend was declared in 1868, but it has been as high before, and once it ran up to a larger amount; could not say exactly how much the company had increased its stock lately. He continued: I became a stockholder in 1845; during this period the dividends have ranged from 9 to 50 per cent. per annum; 10 per cent. of this latter dividend is the regular semi-annual dividend of 5 per cent.; the balance I was paid by the check of the Company inclosed in a note; this dividend was not advertised; I would not like to sell my stock; I have not heard of any of the stock being sold for many years; the capital stock is now $1,000,000; the additional forty per cent. is not exactly a dividend—it is an "extra division;" I paid $114 per share in 1845 for eight shares, and when the capital stock was increased I received two additional shares, (called "watered stock,") on these shares I have received fifty per cent. as well as on the others; I think I received fifty per cent. of dividends in 1867; am not certain.

Q.—Do you feel satisfied with these dividends? A.—Yes, Sir; moneyed men are hard to satisfy, but I feel very well satisfied with my stock.

John Balmore, engineer of the Harlem Gaslight Company, testified: I have held my present position ten years; I am familiar with the manufacture of gas; the gas of our Company averages from eighteen to twenty candles in illuminating power; I make the photometrical examinations myself; I do not think the gas ever goes below the power I have named; it takes half an hour to make a proper test; in all my examinations I have found that the standard power of our gas has been eighteen candles only—once only did it go down as low as 16; we purify our gas by the dry-lime process; our consumers sometimes complain of having poor lights; when a metre is sent out of order it generally registers less gas than passes through it; in my experience I have only found two which registered to the disadvantage of consumers; I have known new metres, with the inspector's seal on them, to register too much, or fail to register at all; I have found hundreds of incorrect metres within the past year; gas of the power of sixteen candles would be fair, but not extra.

Joshua Kidd, gas engineer, of London, was next sworn: He had been in the gas-making business twenty years; was perfectly familiar with the business in all its branches; the power in London is from twelve to eighteen candles; there is an office in every parish in which tests are made; each parish has a certain number of lamps, and it is especially for these lamps that the officers make the test; each lamp is supposed to burn 2,000 feet per year, and the cost is £5 sterling per year; he thought the lower part of New-York was the most miserably lighted place he ever saw; he could tell to almost within half a foot the burning capacity of the burner, and he thought the burners used in the lamps in the lower part of the City did not burn more than a foot and a half an hour; in his opinion gas of a better quality could be supplied to the City at a lower price than it is at present; he had found that the price of coal makes but little difference in the price of gas; in England, where coal is £1 per ton, gas is as cheap as where it costs not more than one quarter of a pound; good gas should be of eighteen-candle power; gas, in traveling through the pipes, lost about one inch in a mile; his object in coming to this country was to introduce a new process of lighting; he could increase the quality of the gas by using the refuse of hydro-carbon matter, or dead oil of tar, by which the light could be increased 300 per cent.; in London they had two gases, cannel and common gas; the cannel gas was of eighteen-candle power and the other twelve; the London common gas cost a little less than $1 per thousand; the cannel gas is about $1 50 per thousand; he had charge of the lighting of London for about three years, and had every opportunity for comparing the quantity of gas consumed as registered on each lamp and by test meters; the cause of the miserably lighted condition of the lower part of the City was the want of pressure; he made a photometrical examination at his office in Maiden-lane and found the gas there to be of about twelve-candle power, sometimes less, sometimes more; this dead oil of tar could be secured from the refuse of petroleum, and one burner would give as much light as four burners of the average style of Broadway gas.

T. K. Lee, Secretary of the Board of Directors of the New-York Gaslight Company, was next sworn. He had been Secretary for about seven years; had access to all the books of the Company; had access to the book in which the dividends were entered, and he made all the entries in that book; he was forbidden by the duties of his office from answering any question with regard to the dividends; when he took the office he was told that he must keep all the affairs of the office secret; he could not state whether he knew what dividends the Company declared; did not know the amount of coal used by the Company; did not know the amount of money received during the past year by the Company; he talked with the President, Mr. Adams, with regard to his subpœna; Mr. Adams told him it was for him to decide what the object of testify; he meant no disrespect to the Committee, but he could not testify with regard to the affairs of the Company without an order from Court; he declined to answer whether he was a stockholder in the Company, because that was his private business.

MR. MITCHELL said the Company was chartered under a law of the State of 1848, and he should insist that the books be brought here; questions regarding the dividends of companies were published in the papers, but those of the New-York Gaslight Company were not.

The question whether the witness should be compelled to answer the question, whether he was a stockholder in the Company or not, was decided unanimously in the affirmative.

The witness testified that he was a stockholder to a small amount, but how much he must decline to answer; the Company's private matters are generally could supply all the gas needed; of late they had generally been able to; he did not know whether the gas furnished by the Company was of a good quality or not; he could not tell how the expenses for the last year compared with those of the year before; he thought they were greater; the salaries of the employes had been raised during the past year; coal cost more last year than the year before; he could only answer four other dividends were declared; he was privileged not to answer that question; any matter which the Board directed to be made public, was public; among the Directors, who were thirteen in number, were Mr. Adams, the President, Guy Richards, Edward J. Wolsey, Moses Taylor, Henry Remsen, Henry Chauncey, John J. Astor, Joseph Sampson, Percy R. Pyne, James R. Taylor, F. W. Stevens and C. L. Everett, Treasurer and Vice-President; he kept the minutes at the Board meetings; all dividends were declared by the Board at its meetings; he declined again to answer how often dividends are declared; as a confidential servant of the Board, he thought he had no right to answer; this rested on his own judgment alone, and not on the order of the Board; the President had access to the minute book; all the entries were in the handwriting of the witness; reports were sent to stockholders whenever dividends were declared; he never heard of any limit in the charter of the Company to the price to be charged for gas; he declined to say what salary he received; none of the officers got a percentage on the profits in addition to their salary that he knew of.

The Committee waited for some time for two large stockholders of the New-York Companies, but, as they did not appear, finally, at a few minutes before 5 P. M., adjourned till 10 A. M. to-day.

The Society for the Protection of Destitute Roman Catholic Children.

The sixth annual report of the Society for the Protection of Destitute Roman Catholic Children has just been published, and proves to be an interesting document.

From a glance at its pages it appears that the expenditures and receipts of the Society, for the past year, were as follows:

The total outlay on account of the Institution, applicable to its maintenance for 1868, including construction and repairs, but exclusive of the boys' building, is.....		$125,337 39
Of which, for the boys' account...	$102,186 56

Total.....		$50,898 22

The number of children accommodated during the year was as follows:

Number of boys in the Institute Dec. 31, 1868, 702; Dec. 31, 1867, 607; increase, 95; number of girls in the Institution Dec. 31, 1868, 162; Dec. 31, 1867, 146; increase, 17; total for 1868, 867; total for 1867, 655; increase, 212. During the year 1868 there received the care of the Institution 1,304 children: Boys, 1,069; girls, 235. The average number of children entitled to the per capital contribution for the quarter ending March 31, 765; quarter ending June 30, 832; quarter ending Sept. 30, 898; quarter ending Dec. 31, 880; and for the year—665 boys, 165 girls; together, 830.

The report is finished thus:

The Managers cannot conclude without thanking all the various benefactors of the Catholic Protectory for the continued interest they manifest in its success. Among these we acknowledge with great gratitude the munificent donation of $10,000 from an unknown donor, who has most disinterestedly concealed all trace of his identity. As he ever reads these lines, it will be agreeable to him to know that his very generous gift was immediately placed beyond all risk of loss or misdirection, by applying it forthwith to the discharge of a mortgage liability not much short of that sum, running at 7 per cent., and which the City Chamberlain might at any time call in. Other liberal contributions and bequests we would gladly particularize in this report, were we permitted so to do. They will appear in their proper place in the table of donations. Our sincere acknowledgments of such gifts, and our earnest determination to make them fully serve the generous purpose of the donors, will, we trust, be accepted as some return, however inadequate, for these munificences. Heretofore it was the thought that we may not be unfit to apply them with effect to their noble destination. Perhaps we ought not here to leave unmentioned that a special subscription, entirely outside of the funds of the Protectory, has been appropriated, in obedience to the will of the subscribers to the erection of a substantial granite monument, and enclosure of the cemetery, to the memory of one to whom we owe much more than we have words to express, our ever-to-be-honored first President, Dr. L. SILLIMAN IVES.

The following are the names of the officers for the present term.

President, Henry James Anderson; Vice-Presidents, Charles M. Connolly, Frederick E. Gibert; Treasurer, Jeremiah Devlin; Secretary, Geo. Lynch; Executive Committee, Eugene Kelly, James Sheridan, L. Hoguet, Bryan Lawrence, Thomas H. O'Connor, the President, Treasurer and Secretary being members ex officio; Legal Adviser, John E. Devlin; Advisory Chaplain, Rev. William Quinn; Actuary, Henry James Anderson; Comptroller, L. T. Jaume; Assistant to President, Robert W. Bowyer; Clerk of the Office, William Coddington; Detailed Police Officer, Thomas Hagan.

The office of reception is at No. 25 Chambers-street, where donations will be gladly received.

The Contested Election of the Thirteenth Assembly District—Testimony of a "Repeater."

The Committee appointed by the Assembly to investigate the frauds alleged to have been committed in the election of Mr. WILLIAM HALPINE, the sitting member from the Thirteenth Assembly in the Seventeenth Election District in this City, yesterday examined several witnesses, at the Metropolitan Hotel, in relation to the charges made of false returns, illegal voting, &c. The contestant, Mr. ALEXANDER MCLEOD, who claims to be entitled to the seat now occupied by HALPINE, was represented by his counsel, Messrs. LOW, SHAW and SMITH, and the defendant appeared by Hon. NELSON J. WATERBURY.

The following witnesses for the contestant were examined and testified as follows:

John J. Williamson—I live at No. 133 Pine-street; I am a Policeman, and belong to the Station-house between Seventh and Eighth avenues, in Twentieth-street; the Assembly boxes from each Assembly District are in my possession; they contain the ballots brought to my Station-house; the boxes most of the time were locked up in a cell in my Station-house; they were in the cell before, but were not under lock and key; I think the boxes were sealed when they came, and they remained and are in the same condition now as when first locked up; the contents are the same; no one has had access to them; they were locked up about two weeks after coming into my possession; I have carried the key ever since; Mr. Manierre ordered me to lock them up; before being locked up they were in the cellar of the Station-house; only persons connected with the Police Department could have access to them; each box was locked up on the closing of the canvass, and the keys have been in my possession ever since.

Cross-examined by Hon. N. J. Waterbury—Sixty-two to sixty-five persons had access to them; prisoners are locked up and are discharged about seven or eight A. M.; they are kept under guard all night; I never saw the contents of the boxes, except through a glass; don't know whether locks fastened or not; same key fits on all the boxes; Mr. Manierre gave orders to me at the Central office to keep the keys in my pocket; no one could get in or out through the rear of the building; there was no window in the cell.

Moses Jackson, policeman of the same precinct, corroborated the foregoing witness' testimony.

Wm. H. Westfall, Poll Clerk in the Twelfth Election District, next testified, but his evidence was unimportant.

Henry Williamson was then called: I reside at No. 102 Greene-street; I voted for Mr. Halpine; voted at two places—first between Seventeenth and Eighteenth streets, and between Nineteenth and Twentieth streets, in Seventh-avenue; I voted the straight Democratic ticket both times.

Cross-examined—My real name is WILLIAMSON; don't remember by what names I voted; I did not register; the names I was to vote were handed me on a slip of paper by some party in Nineteenth-street; don't know his name; twenty-five or thirty went in a party as repeaters; one was JOHN SMITH, and another by the name of Austin; don't know the names of the party that led the gang; we started from Wilkinson's liquor store and voted at half-past one o'clock at the first polling place, and at two P. M. at the second; I was not challenged; saw no one in the Sixteenth Ward I knew; the polls were held in a feed store between Seventeenth and Eighteenth streets; I read and write very well, and am a carpenter.

At the conclusion of this testimony the further investigation of the case was adjourned to Friday, March 12, at 3 P. M. The next sitting will be held in Albany.

The Legislative Committee on Railroads.

The Assembly Committee on Railroads met yesterday morning at the Fifth-avenue Hotel, and after transacting some preliminary business, adjourned. The Committee will be in session every day this week. The Committee consists of Messrs. Bemus, Wm. M. Ely, Walker, Gleason, Selkreg, Jacobs and Suffern.

The following is the substance of the preamble and resolution under which the Committee was appointed:

Whereas, Large additions have been made from time to time to the capital stock of the Hudson River Railroad Company, the New-York Central, the Buffalo and Erie Railroad and the Erie Railway, and as grave doubts exist as to the right of said companies to increase their capital stock; therefore,

Resolved, That a Special Committee of Seven be appointed to investigate all the facts connected with such issue of stock, with directions to report what, if any, legislation is necessary to protect the rights of stockholders in railroad corporations, and prevent the secret issue of stock therein; and further, whether, under the law giving the Canal Commissioners supervisory power over railroads in certain cases, those roads which have violated their charter should not be placed in charge of the Canal Commissioners.

Kings County Supervisors.

The Kings County Board of Supervisors met yesterday. A resolution was called up relative to the laying out of the county towns' streets on the same plan of the streets in Brooklyn.

Supervisor STILLWELL, of Gravesend, desired that the consideration of the subject be deferred until Supervisor CROOKE, of Flatbush, had an opportunity of being present, as that gentleman was interested in the project.

Superintendent LITTLE thought it was of the utmost importance that as little time as possible should be wasted in reaching a conclusion as to the laying out of the streets of the county towns. He knew of gentlemen who desired to build a good class of houses in Flatlands, but who were deterred from proceeding with them by the tardiness of the Board in doing something. The subject was laid over.

A special act for presentation to the Legislature, authorizing the Supervisors to borrow $75,000 for the erection of a workhouse, to be under the direction of the Commissioners of the Poor, was duly approved of by the Board.

The Committee on the Lunatic Asylum reported in favor of appropriating $20,000 to ventilate the old portion of the Asylum. The report was adopted, and the County Treasurer was authorized to borrow that amount.

The same Committee reported in favor of appropriating $30,000 for the payment of bills incurred by building the addition to the Asylum. Adopted.

A report from the Penitentiary Committee, recommending the appropriation of $75,000 toward completing the workshop and wall around the Penitentiary, was adopted.

A resolution offered by Superintendent WHITEHILL instructing the Almshouse Committee to ascertain what the cost of erecting a gas-house to supply the county buildings with gas would be, was adopted, and the Board adjourned until next Thursday.

Decease of an Old Policeman.

Tuesday evening last STEWART J. SMITH, more familiarly known as Jack Smith, died at his residence in Elizabeth-street. The deceased was about fifty-two years of age, and for more than twenty years past had been connected with the Police force of this City, and was very generally noticed for his efficiency and zeal as an officer. For several years past his health has been poor, and he had been assigned to duty at the Toombs and Jefferson Market Police Courts. He did not quit the latter post until two weeks ago, when his increasing infirmities drove him to his bed, from which he never rose. The funeral of the deceased will take place this afternoon.

The Eleventh Ward Boys' Lodging-House.

This Lodging-house, situated at No. 276 East Eleventh-street, and opened by the Children's Aid Society some three years since, has afforded to the street boys of that locality a most excellent home, without which they would have had to endure a great deal of suffering, and the property in the neighborhood have been subject to all manner of such depredations as are practiced by the class who find a lodging there. Owing to the financial condition of the Society, the Lodging-house is now in want of many things necessary to the comfort of the boys, such as suitable bedding, and the numberless little articles that make such places attractive, comfortable and pleasant. The managers hope that the large shipbuilding interest and the owners of the large machine shops in the neighborhood will, for their own interest, at least, help them to sustain this very important branch of their work.

Coroners' Cases.

Coroner SCHIRMER yesterday held an inquest at the New-York Hospital on the remains of DENNIS KING, a native of Ireland, 35 years of age. The deceased was admitted to the hospital on the 9th of February, suffering from a fracture of the right radius, and severe contused wounds on the forehead and leg, which he had received two weeks previously on board the steamship Queen, during a storm at sea, by being knocked down by a wave which swept over the vessel, on which he was a sailor. A verdict was rendered of death by exhaustion from injuries accidentally received.

Coroner KEENAN yesterday held an inquest at No. 97 James-street over the body of NATHAN WHITTAKER, aged 26 years, who had died suddenly in the house during the preceding night. A post-mortem examination by Dr. WOOSTER BEACH showed that death had resulted from disease of the heart, and a verdict to that effect was rendered.

meet the outstanding Gold Notes of the Treasury. The showing, altogether, is exceedingly encouraging, after the less favorable exhibit at the close of January.

The demand for Money from the Brokers was again active to-day, but not so general as the sudden turn in the market on Monday Afternoon indicated that it might be. The free rates of Interest have brought a number of new private lenders into the Street with sums varying from $50,000 to $250,000, and also an increased offering by some of the up-town Savings Banks and Insurance Offices. After 2 o'clock, there was an easier feeling among borrowers. The sales of the day varied from 7 ₱ cent. Currency to 7 ₱ cent. Gold.Interest on the Railway and Miscellaneous collateral, and 6@7 ₱ cent. Currency on the Public Funds and Gold. Merchant paper of prime names, 8 to 9 ₱ cent. outside of Bank, and (when taken on dealers' account) 7 ₱ cent. at Bank.

In Foreign Bills the tendency to firmness in the market has partially abated, as one or two large drawers appeared to-day at 109 ₱ cent. 60 days on London, and £70,000 sold by one banking firm at this rate, less a sixteenth brokerage. Short Sight Bills, 109¾@109⅞ ₱ cent.

The speculators for the fresh upward turn in the Gold Room made a demonstration this morning as high as 132¼@132⅛ ₱ cent. upon the early bond quotation, 81 ₱ cent. from London, but the market soon began to show signs of weakness, and the sales before the close of Bank hours fell off to 131⅞@¾@⅝ ₱ cent. The Customs demand this week is over half a million of dollars per day, but we believe that very few of the importers are disposed to supply their wants for this object in the open market, the conviction being very general that the advent of the new Administration at Washington to-morrow, in connection with the heavy demand for United States Stocks abroad, will make Gold lower as the Spring season advances. The large accumulation in the Treasury, in the ownership of the Government, seventy million of dollars, will undoubtedly, we believe, soon be brought out in exchange for and in reduction of the Gold-Bearing Public Debt.

On the Stock Exchange the Public Funds opened with much steadiness, notwithstanding the first Cable figure for 1862s 81 ₱ cent. in London, and as this quotation subsequently improved to 81½ ₱ cent., and news came from Washington of the passage through both Houses of Congress of the Schenck bill relating to the Public Credit, the bidding for all the 5-20s became quite firm, and at the close of business the 1862s were 117¾ and the 1867s 112⅝ ₱ cent. There was not much done in the Southern State Bonds. The Railway speculation was weak through the forenoon and prices ¾@1½ ₱ cent. lower than last night, but after one o'clock there was a partial recovery, and at the Afternoon Boards some show of firmness. After the Boards broke up, the Long Room dealings were again weaker. The Miscellaneous Stocks improved on Mariposa and Pacific Mail. The late general quotations were as follows, as compared with Tuesday night. The Public Funds strong; Gold steady; the Railways somewhat feverish; the feeling in regard to the Money market decidedly better.

The day's business at the Office of the United States Assistant Treasurer was as follows: Total receipts, $1,070,399; total payments, $1,299,482; balance, $87,701,242. The receipts include for Customs, $502,000; for Gold Notes, $59,000.

The holders of all Registered United States Stocks are reminded that under the new rule of the Treasury the half yearly interest must be drawn out in ninety days from its maturity, at New-York and other Offices than Washington, at which the interest is registered to be paid. After that time the registers are returned to the Department at Washington, where the interest will have to be applied for in person or by attorney. Thus the ten-forty registered interest, which fell due on Monday last, March 1, must be called for by the 1st of June to avoid the extra trouble of collecting it at Washington. And the 1st of May five-twenty registered Interest must be called for before the 1st of August.

The rumor was quite current in the Street to-day that Mr. ALEXANDER T. STEWART, the eminent Dry Goods merchant of this City, and the known confidential personal friend of the President elect, is to be the new Secretary of the Treasury. We believe that as late as last week Mr. STEWART himself was unwilling to have his friends talk to him in regard to such an honor, even if he had the vanity to suppose it would be tendered by Gen. GRANT, and while we have no reason to suppose that his feelings on the subject have undergone the slightest change, we find the rumor of his appointment quite generally credited this Afternoon.

The London papers announce the decease of Mr. EDWARD BELL, of the house of Messrs. THOMSON, BONAR & Co. He was one of the members of Parliament, elect, for the City of London, of Conservative politics. He had been forty-four years in the house of THOMSON, BONAR & Co. Since his death, the Cable has reported the election (probably unopposed) of Baron LIONEL ROTHSCHILD, Liberal, to the vacant seat in Parliament. Baron ROTHSCHILD stood fourth on the City of London poll at the November election—three members elected, two Liberal, and Mr. BELL Conservative.

BANKING AND FINANCIAL.

☞ THE UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY'S BONDS are a first mortgage upon one of the longest lines of railroad in the world. The amount will be less than $27,000 per mile. The earnings from local business over a portion of the road last year were over five million dollars, and after its completion early this season, the immense through traffic of the Pacific States will increase this sum to fifteen or twenty millions. The payment of both interest and principal of the bonds in gold is, therefore, perfectly sure.

The present high price of Governments offers a favorable opportunity to sell and to reinvest in a bond equally safe and more valuable on account of the longer period before its maturity. The exchange will now pay a profit of from ten to eighteen per cent. As the issue of these bonds will soon cease, parties who desire to invest are invited to make their subscriptions at once. They will be received at the Company's office, No. 20 Nassau-street, and by JOHN J. CISCO & SON, No. 59 Wall-street, and by banks and bankers generally. A pamphlet, with full particulars, sent free on application.

☞ SAFE DEPOSIT DEPARTMENT OF THE NATIONAL PARK BANK—For the safe-keeping and protection from fire and burglars, of Securities of all kinds, including Bonds, Stocks, Mortgages, Wills and Diamonds, and valuable Jewelry of every description. An inspection of the vault, constructed by the National Park Bank in their new building, will at once convince all parties interested that the most perfect attainable security has been reached, and at an extremely moderate annual cost to each individual depositor. The officers will take pleasure in showing the vault on application.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

EUROPE.

Later advices from Asia state that the affair at Korat was not as disastrous as was reported, the British having lost only one man killed and two taken prisoners. The death of Viscount GOUGH occurred yesterday at London.

The Ex-King of Hanover has published a protest, over his own signature, in Berlin, against the confiscation of his private property by the Russian Government.

Seven Carlist leaders have been arrested in the Province of Aragon, and a quantity of arms and munitions of war, with correspondence, had been seized by the Government.

CUBA.

The report recently published in the Diareo announcing the surrender of the revolutionary Gen. ARINGO is denied as impossible. The steamship Morro Castle, from New-York, arrived at Havana yesterday.

The Spanish man-of-war Cadiz arrived at Havana yesterday, with 1,000 additional troops. Mr. JOHN M. UTLEY, the clerk for the American Consul General, was ordered to be released from prison, where he has remained for the past month.

CONGRESS.

In the Senate yesterday a debate ensued, after the passage of the Deficiency bill, on the proposal to recompense Mr. W. W. CORCORAN for his lands in the District of Columbia, used by the Government ever since 1861, and settled in his favor. The bill to strengthen the public credit was also taken up and discussed until the expiration of the morning hour, when the report of the Conference Committee was agreed to by a vote of 31 to 26. The text will be found in the regular proceedings. The Army Appropriation bill was passed after a protracted debate on the war claim set up by Massachusetts. The joint resolution expressing sympathy with Spain having been reported back by Mr. SUMNER, the Senate refused to concur. In the evening session considerable debate was had on the Louisiana contestant's claim for expenses, and on the appropriation of money to the Sisters of Charity in Charleston, which was rejected. A vote of thanks was tendered Senator WADE in anticipation of his retirement for the Vice-President's chair to-day. At 12:30 A. M. the Senate went into Executive session.

In the House, and immediately after the session opened, Speaker COLFAX tendered his resignation in a brief speech. The occasion drew together a large assemblage of visitors. After a complimentary resolution on the retirement of the Vice-President elect, Mr. POMEROY was, by resolution, declared Speaker for the remainder of the session. An animated discussion occurred on the proposition to rescind the resolution to pay the Louisiana contestants $2,500 each, the subject going over. A bill was reported to amend the act imposing taxes on distilled spirits and tobacco, which extends the time for the withdrawal of whisky from bonded warehouses. A resolution denying the right of the Executive or treaty-making power to conclude treaties where import duties are regulated was referred. The Public Credit bill was again debated in reference to the second section. The conference report was adopted and the bill sent to the President for signature. At the evening session the Army Appropriation bill, as amended by the Senate, was non-concurred in and referred to a Committee of Conference. The bill on removal of disabilities was discussed. At 1:30 o'clock the House was still in session.

GENERAL.

Advices from Camp Supply, Indian Territory, up to the 14th ult., represent the Indians as quiet and rapidly moving South. Gen. CUSTER had failed to find the Cheyenne camp in his reconnoissance up Medicine Bluff Creek. The military were all active in taking up the positions assigned them.

G. D. HUGHES, of Marshall, was yesterday nominated by the Michigan Democratic State Convention for Justice of the Supreme Court over COOLEY, the Republican nominee, by a vote of 65 to 52.

Gen. STONEMAN has issued an order relative to the Kuklux of Virginia, instructing Col. ROSE to notify the civil officers of his district that if they do not arrest the authors of the outrages reported, and not prevent the occurrence of such outrages in future, he will send a detachment of mounted men into that region, to be subsisted and foraged at the expense of the citizens, until good order is reëstablished and security to person and property is again afforded by the civil authorities.

In the Illinois Senate yesterday the restrictive Railroad bill was passed, and the House will undoubtedly pass it, as no opposition is manifested by railroad men.

The West Virginia Legislature yesterday ratified the Suffrage Amendment to the Constitution.

The trial of HARRY WEAVER and Mrs. ROLAND, for the murder of ANDREW ROLAND, husband of the woman mentioned, at Hagerstown, Md., is to be commenced in a day or two. The alleged murder was committed in September last. A criminal intimacy was said to exist between WEAVER and the wife of the deceased, and circumstances led to the belief that that these two were responsible for Mr. ROLAND'S taking off. The woman was arrested, but WEAVER had made his escape, but was arrested in Ohio a short time afterward.

The bill to abolish transit duties on railroads and canals in New-Jersey was yesterday passed by the Senate, and the House will probably follow with similar action to-day.

The bark Hala Frank, of Boston, whose abandonment at sea was reported yesterday, has been towed into Gloucester harbor in an apparently good condition. Capt. MERRILL remained on board, having been deserted by his crew.

The Wisconsin Senate decided, yesterday, to indefinitely postpone the proposition to submit to the people, in 1870, the question of extending suffrage to women.

Mrs. ANNIE PARKER, daughter-in-law of HARVEY D. PARKER, of Boston, was married in Paris on Monday, according to the rites of the Catholic Church, to Mr. E. DECHAMPS, one of the Secretaries of the Chinese Embassy. Ambassador BURLINGAME and the entire Embassy witnessed the ceremonies.

Chicago has sent an elegant gavel to be presented to Mr. COLFAX for his use as President of the Senate. It was made by the same man who made the gavel used at the Chicago Convention of 1860.

Newcastle, N. H., has its town election one week before the regular State election, and as it is the only town in the State where such is the case, much interest is always felt in the result. Last year the Democrats carried the town by ten majority. On Tuesday, the Republicans had a majority of thirty, and elected the Selectmen and all the town officers, which gives them control of the check list next Tuesday. The political campaign has been remarkably quiet throughout the State. Until this week no public meetings have been held by either party, and even now very few are to be held.

A meeting of citizens of Auburn was held on Tuesday, to make arrangements to give Secretary SEWARD a public reception and hearty welcome on his return home. A committee of seven was appointed to carry out the objects of the meeting, and Dr. S. WILLARD was invited to deliver an address of welcome.

Rev. HENRY POWERS, late of Danbury, Conn., was installed Pastor of the Elm-place Congregational Church, Brooklyn, last evening. Rev. Drs. COE, BADGER, BUDDINGTON and CLAPP, and Revs. R. G. GREEN, or Springfield, Mass.; LEONARD W. BACON, of Williamsburg; A. L. FRISBIE, of Danbury, Conn., and HENRY WARD BEECHER, took part in the exercises. There was a large and deeply interested congregation.

The regular semi-monthly meeting of the New-York Board of Education was held last evening. An appropriation of $75,000 was asked for by the trustees of the Tenth Ward for enlarging Primary School No. 1, in Ludlow-street, but the motion to grant the same was tabled indefinitely. The sum of $24,000 was appropriated for the purchase of lots in West Fifty-fourth-street, for the erection of an edifice for the use of Primary School No. 40. After the transaction of considerable routine business, the Board adjourned.

The Legislative Committee on Public Health appointed to investigate the sewerage system of this City held their first session at the Fifth-avenue Hotel yesterday, and heard an explanation and defence of the system from officers of the Croton Board. Any one having complaints to make about the system will be heard to-day, commencing at 9 A. M.

Up to the 3d inst., 9,990 emigrants have arrived at this port since the 1st of January.

The Legislative Committee on Railroads met at the Fifth-avenue Hotel yesterday, but transacted no business.

Representatives from forty tailoring establishments met last night at No. 10 Stanton-street, and discussed the feasibility of a united demand of twenty-five per cent. on their present wages. By piece-work, an able hand earns $20 to $25 a week, working from fifteen to eighteen hours a day. Working ten hours a day, they can only earn about $15 a week.

Cotton was more freely dealt in yesterday, but closed heavily. Flour was in moderate request at slightly irregular prices. Wheat was quoted lower, on a fair business, mainly for export. Corn and Oats were somewhat firmer, but not active. Provisions in moderate demand; Pork lower; Lard firm. Groceries tamer. Freights dull.

The Close of Mr. Johnson's Administration—Its Blunders, Defects and Failures.

ANDREW JOHNSON closes to-day his administration of the Executive office. It has been in very many respects one of the most unfortunate and disastrous we have ever known. Beginning just as the great civil war had closed, and following the murder of President LINCOLN, by whom that war had been carried to a triumphant end, it fell upon a time when the public passions were greatly agitated, and when the sway of calm judgment, more than ever necessary, was more than ever difficult. A President who could meet the emergencies of the hour, and restore our political society to its normal condition of peace and harmony, would have won for himself the proudest distinction which great public service can ever bestow, and for his country the choicest blessings which good and wise government can ever confer.

Mr. JOHNSON, as President, has failed to do this, and, as a consequence, he leaves the office with the profound conviction of the whole country that he ought never to have held it. Great communities judge men by what they might have done, if their abilities had been equal to their opportunities; and the magnitude of their failures, if they fail, is always measured by what would have been the grandeur of their successes, if they had succeeded. Mr. JOHNSON is naturally, therefore, set down as having made the greatest failure, and been the worst President, ever known thus far in the history of the country. When his Administration can be judged more coolly and calmly than is now possible, especially if the Constitution should again resume supreme authority, this judgment may be modified; but for many years to come, there is little chance that it will be essentially changed.

Mr. JOHNSON was nominated to be Vice-President, on the same ticket with Mr. LINCOLN, by the Republican Party, because he had been a zealous Union man, and a warm supporter of Mr. LINCOLN'S Administration and conduct of the war, and because being a Southern man, who had suffered for his hatred of secession, it was supposed that he could do more to reconcile Southern union sentiment to the result of the war, and bring the South again into the Union, than any man of Northern birth and political experience. This was the general sentiment in regard to him during the canvass which resulted in his election; and from this point of view his nomination and election were accepted as fortunate incidents in the political history of the country. The harangue on his inauguration startled the public, shocked his friends and created the sharpest misgivings as to his future course; but this proved to be a temporary feeling, as the incident from which it grew was explained to be an accident not likely to recur. And this partial restoration of the public confidence was aided by his declarations on his accession to the Presidency, which were of most vehement and bitter hatred of the rebellion, and of all connected with it in any way, and of a determined purpose to make their action infamous and their names a hissing and a byeword through all coming time. These sentiments were peculiarly acceptable to those whom his maudlin harangue on inauguration day had most offended, and went far to procure for him a qualified and temporary absolution.

But they soon yielded to a different temper on his part, and to a different judgment on the part of the public. Mr. JOHNSON failed to do, what was the evident dictate of duty as well as of good policy,—namely, summon Congress in special session to share the anxieties and responsibilities of this new position. Believing that he was following the policy of Mr. LINCOLN, and largely influenced, doubtless, by the advice of Mr. SEWARD, he entered upon a course of reconstruction which was obnoxious from the outset to that class of Republicans whose hatred of secession had rested mainly on their hatred of slavery, and which brought about a conflict with Congress that put him in an attitude of open and defiant hostility to the whole Republican Party. This war soon absorbed the action of Congress and the attention of the country. It colored the whole conduct of public affairs, alienated the confidence and respect of the people for the President, and brought the two great Departments of the Government into open and sharp collision.

Mr. JOHNSON'S earliest blunder was his attempt to ignore Congress in his plan of reconstruction. When that body first met, after the close of the war, it manifested little inclination to adopt extreme measures. Moderation and discretion on the part of the Executive would probably have secured its coöperation and the early restoration of the Union. But Mr. JOHNSON was not moderate or discreet. On the contrary he clung to his plan long after Congress pronounced it unsatisfactory, and as persistently struggled to thwart the legislative measures which were intended to revive lawful civil Government throughout the South. These measures were not at the outset harsh or unjust. The Fourteenth Amendment was offered as the basis of restoration, and would doubtless have been so accepted but for Mr. JOHNSON'S evil counsels. He recommended the South to reject it, and his advice was accepted. For the consequences of that rejection, in their relation both to the South and himself, he is in the main responsible.

There was a time when Mr. JOHNSON might have gracefully retired from the conflict. His policy and the policy of Congress were both before the country, whose verdict—adverse to himself—was unmistakable. It was his duty then to surrender his own views, so far as their practical application was concerned, and to endeavor to give effect to the measures of Congress in a manner harmonizing with their well understood purpose. That chance of reëstablishing friendly relations with the Republican Party he threw away. Instead of becoming more manageable, he became more defiant. His energies were employed in attempts to break down the reconstruction policy to which the country had given its assent. He sought in the letter of the law pretexts for thwarting its spirit; he visited with punishment every leading administrator of the law, who zealously strove to give effect to its provisions.

Out of this inexcusable resistance to the reconstruction policy arose the retaliatory legislation which, while incensing Mr. JOHNSON, has impaired the dignity and efficiency of the Presidential office. The tendency of these measures to disturb the constitutional balance of power—to render Congress absolute and the Executive little more than a nonentity,—cannot be questioned. We may well doubt, therefore, whether in the highest sense they were ever really expedient. Their origin is traceable to Mr. JOHNSON'S misuse of the power he possessed, and in their bearing upon himself they may have admitted of defence. The misfortune is that what was intended to restrain only him gradually obtains recognition as a means of magnifying unduly the relative authority of Congress in the Government, and thus destroying the constitutional balance of power.

The effect of a conflict thus occasioned by Mr. JOHNSON and thus carried on by Congress, has been disastrous far outside of reconstruction. It had been bad enough were it limited to the States concerned in the rebellion. The delay in their restoration and the ill-feeling and industrial prostration which delay produced, would have been disasters sufficiently serious to obscure the lesser glories of the war. But the mischief traceable to Mr. JOHNSON and his untimely quarrel with Congress has extended much further. It has embarrassed and demoralized the entire administration of affairs. It has led to measures which have shaken the authority and menaced the existence of the Supreme Court. It has destroyed all harmony of feeling and of action among the different Departments of the Government. The revenue departments have become strongholds of knavery and corruption. The Treasury suffers and the country is disgraced. And no remedy has been possible, because the Senate has sacrificed all other considerations to its desire to thwart the Executive in the matter of removals and appointments to office.

On the whole we are forced to the conclusion that Mr. JOHNSON'S Administration has been an era of disaster for the country. It will fill a page of our history which the future historian will not consult with satisfaction. We do not concur in the current feeling which attributes all these untoward results to the natural depravity of Mr. JOHNSON'S character, but rather to innate defects which in their results have almost as thoroughly unfitted him for useful public service. We do not believe he has intentionally sought to betray the country into the hands of its enemies, or that his misconduct has sprung from any innate sympathy with the rebellion, or any desire to revive the supremacy of its authors. But he is a man of invincible obstinacy, incapable of taking advice that does not echo his own preconceived opinions, and utterly unfitted for any but a thoroughly partisan part in the conduct of public affairs. Good intentions are but a small part in the essential qualifications of a public ruler. They are important beyond doubt, but scarcely more so than a calm dispassionate judgment, an equable temper, a willingness to consult the opinions and the sentiments of others, and the ability to profit by and act upon them. None of these qualities are incompatible with a just self-respect or a proper independence and pride of action; and they are all indispensable in a country governed by the people, to a wise, judicious and successful administration of public affairs.

Fortunately the country has prospered under Mr. JOHNSON'S Administration, but not as a result of his policy. Reconstruction has advanced toward completion, not as a consequence of his influence, but in spite of it. The process of pacification has gone on under the operation of causes to which he has not contributed. He will leave us nearer peace than he found us, but for this we may thank the good sense of the American people, and the boundless resources of our country, rather than the purity or efficiency of his administration of public affairs. It is useless to dispute the fact that a general sense of relief is the public sentiment, which, untinged with personal ill-will, attends upon the close of Mr. JOHNSON'S administration,—as upon the removal of an obstacle which has checked the restoration of peace and retarded the prosperity of the country.

Mr. Gladstone's Disestablishment Bill.

Mr. GLADSTONE has quickly and faithfully redeemed the promise he made at the opening of the session, and has introduced a full, elaborate and conclusive measure for the disestablishment of the Irish Church. In consequence of the resignation of Mr. DISRAELI immediately upon the result of the elections becoming known, the Liberal chief and his colleagues have had ample time for calm reflection and for framing a comprehensive measure. And as far as we can judge from the cable outline of Mr. GLADSTONE'S introductory speech, they seem to have succeeded most admirably. The material issues involved are so vast, the personal and corporate interests so complicated, and the religious animosities excited so bitter, that the task of framing a measure that should thoroughly effect the main object in hand, and yet excite the smallest amount of unnecessary opposition, must have taxed the wisdom and experience of Mr. GLADSTONE'S Cabinet to the utmost. The measure upon which, notwithstanding certain minor differences of opinion, the members of the Cabinet have agreed, in no way resembles that in which Mr. DISRAELI first commenced the task of educating his party up to the required mark in the matter of Reform. It is complete in itself, the principle is clear and intelligible, the means adopted for carrying it into effect are thoroughgoing and simple, the details are well adjusted, and as far as can at present be seen, due provision is made for the equitable settlement of all conflicting claims and difficulties that may arise after the passage of the act.

The principle of the bill is, as we have said, simple. It aims at one great object—the relief of the Irish Roman Catholic people from the grievance of an alien Church, forced on them by penal laws, and now maintained by less tyrannical means, but still by most galling and offensive enactments and prescription. All personal interests are to be duly protected, compensation is to be extended to all who hold preferment or derive income from Church property, but beyond this, the only State aid to the Protestant organization in Ireland will be the grant of money for the support of the Cathedrals, they being regarded as national structures. In order to carry out fully the principle of religious equality, the Presbyterian ministers are to receive annuities in compensation for the loss of the Regium Donum, and the grant to Maynooth will be capitalized. Eight millions sterling, or about half the capitalized value of the Church property, will be required for the full compensation of all loss accruing to existing interests, and for the future every religious community in Ireland, no matter what its nature, must rely alone on the contributions of its members. In the sales of leases of Church property, the tenant is to have the first option of purchase, and the tithe rent-charge is to be offered first to the owners of the land on which it is levied, at twenty-two and a half years' purchase, before being put up to auction.

The surplus property of the Church, after the satisfaction of all equitable claims, will amount to some eight and a half millions sterling, and although the preamble of the bill is negatively definite enough as to the scope of its employment, it leaves one or two points somewhat uncertain as to the purposes to which it is to be devoted. It is "to be employed for the advantage of the Irish people; not for the purposes of any Church or class, nor for the teaching of religion." The relief of exceptional distress, and the assistance of purely charitable institutions, such as asylums and hospitals, seems to be intended. It is certain, however, that the final disposal of this enormous sum will not be effected without much contention, and all the patience and tact of the Liberal leaders will be required to accomplish the task satisfactorily, and to establish fitting tribunals for its apportionment in detail.

On the whole, Mr. GLADSTONE may be warmly congratulated upon the broad and statesmanlike measure he has produced in response to the emphatic call of the people of Great Britain, which placed him in power as the executor of their determination to remove a great and crying injustice, and atone, as far as possible, for a national crime. He has been true to the principle to which he pledged himself, and has not flinched from carrying it to all its legitimate conclusions. But he has, also, by a prudent and liberal regard for existing interests, avoided the odium attaching to anything like individual confiscation, and produced a measure which will, we are inclined to think, become law with greater facility, and give rise to less acrimonious discussion, than any other that could have been devised.

The New President.

President GRANT begins his new career to-day under favorable auspices. Seldom, after so heated a contest as that which resulted in his election, have all parties so promptly acquiesced in the decision of the nation, or felt so general a confidence in an untried President. Even the World, whose intense partisanship during the canvass, not pausing at the respect due to private character, indulged in the bitterest personal vilification, now declares, "We are constrained to say at least this in Gen. GRANT'S favor, that he is a growing man, and evinces a rare capacity to improve by experience." As a whole, the country looks to his administration with a general confidence unprecedented, we venture to say, for at least thirty years; and the general disappointment in the career of his predecessor only throws his own prospects, by contrast, into stronger light.

Undoubtedly this general acquiescence and confidence are based on faith in Gen. GRANT'S personal character, talents and temperament, as being especially suited to his high place. His well-known firmness of will, tempered by moderation in judgment; his pertinacity, of a sort which is not the offspring of rashness or ill-blood; his promptness of action after candor and deliberation of thought—in brief, his leading personal characteristics are generally conceived to be precisely those which, joined with the honesty, unflinching integrity and patriotism he is known to possess, are required in his new position. Chancellor KENT says, in speaking of the President as it was designed he should be, "It is not for him to deliberate or decide upon the wisdom or expediency of the law; what has once been declared to be law, under all the cautious forms of deliberation prescribed by the Constitution, ought to receive prompt obedience. The characteristical qualities required in the Executive Department are promptitude, decision and force."

True it is that, in the excited canvass of last year, it was the fashion to decry GRANT as being by instinct and profession a soldier, and to represent (despite the fresh experience of TYLER, PIERCE and BUCHANAN,) that a man versed in politics was the only fit person for the Chief Magistracy of the nation. Had Gen. HANCOCK been GRANT'S opponent, this much-elaborated argument, it is safe to say, would never have been heard of; and, as it was, it ignored the fact that the popular will had long decided otherwise—GRANT being the fifth successful soldier who has been elected to the Presidency, and his predecessors bearing names so honored in history and in popular affection and respect as those of WASHINGTON, JACKSON, HARRISON and TAYLOR.

And it is a sign of hope and promise of support for the new Administration that, since the November election, the "campaign" objections to Gen. GRANT have been forgotten. When even the World admits that it is prepared to find him "upon the whole a tolerably satisfactory President," it is a significant token of the general support which the best men of all parties are willing to give to the new Administration. We profoundly believe that it will prove worthy of such support.

University Tests in England.

The fact that Sir J. D. COLERIDGE, Mr. GLADSTONE'S Solicitor-General, has introduced a bill for the repeal of University Tests is one of the most remarkable manifestations of the reforming impulse which is now pervading every branch of the British Constitution. While the Scotch Universities have long participated in the religious equality of their country, and made no discrimination between members of different religious creeds, Oxford and Cambridge, the two ancient, powerful and wealthy Universities of England, have long fought to the last against any infringement of their old intolerant exclusiveness. Of late, however, certain concessions have been made by both of them in the right direction, and it may be mentioned incidentally that the senior wrangler—i. e., the first of his year in mathematical honors—at Cambridge is this year a Jew, and that the authorities of the University have decided to waive in his case the customary oath exacted from applicants for a degree. The same University has for some time also, we believe, admitted Protestant Dissenters to a degree. Similar concessions, though to a much less extent, have been made at the sister University, but they none of them touch the root of the matter. It is little advantage to those who cannot conscientiously accept the doctrines of the Church that they can take the bare degree, without the possibility of enjoying the more solid academical advantages to which it leads in the case of others. At present, although religious tests are not demanded at either University from students on their entrance, the foundation scholarships and studentships designed for the encouragement and support of meritorious students are placed beyond the reach of the Roman Catholic, Jew, or Dissenter. The rich fellowships—many of them a fortune to the holder in themselves—the great professorships, a share in the government of the University or of the different Colleges, are all exclusively the privilege of men who have complied with the most stringent religious tests and taken the most binding oaths of allegiance to the Anglican Church, "as by law established."

We have had no definite particulars of the details of Sir JOHN COLERIDGE'S bill, and consequently can form no idea of how far he proposes to go in the reform of a state of things so contrary to the spirit of religious liberality which characterizes the age, both in England and elsewhere. His measure, we presume, will only be an installment of the equal justice which must ultimately be dealt out to all denominations in the matter of University rewards and dignities, as well as in that of access to their purely educational advantages. But it is a great thing that any measure of the kind should have been introduced by Mr. GLADSTONE'S Government and brought before the House by an official of such unquestioned attachment to the Church as Sir JOHN COLERIDGE. It shows that a movement which has long been perceptible among the more enlightened section of churchmen is rapidly gaining ground. There is a growing belief among the most devoted supporters of the Church of England that henceforth she must stand on her own intrinsic merits and her own claims upon public attachment, and that no further reliance can be placed upon the attempt to monopolize the means of education or to exclude all without her walls from their rights, as Englishmen, to a full share in the dignities, prizes and distinctions of the two grand historical seats of learning of their country. There are certain positions, it is true, which must be reserved for churchmen—as long as the Establishment lasts, that is to say—but even now there is no reason why a Protestant Dissenter, at all events, should be debarred from filling the most important chair or holding the fattest fellowship. The grievance which the Dissenter now feels most acutely is the fact that whatever his position, wealth and education, his sons, however talented and however well-fitted to shine in any of the higher walks of life, are virtually shut out from all participation in the benefits of the two National Universities, unless they renounce the belief in which they have been brought up. They are allowed to enter as undergraduates, and a degree may even be coldly bestowed upon them. But they are for all that regarded as Pariahs by the stiff and orthodox Professor, or the portly and rubicund college "Don." From this galling injustice Mr. GLADSTONE proposes, in part at least, to release a large and influential portion of the community, and with his commanding majority he ought to be able to succeed. It is only by measures like these that the English Church can be saved from rough handling hereafter, and Mr. GLADSTONE as a sincere churchman himself, shows great wisdom in thus grappling with the question so early in the session of the Reformed Parliament.

MINOR TOPICS.

"The King is dead—long live the King!" We warned all our contemporaries yesterday not to begin their editorial articles to-day by quoting this tempting passage of French history. But they must have found it quite hard to refrain from using what describes in so pert and pithy a way the fact that at 12 o'clock to-day the rule of ANDREW JOHNSON ends and that of ULYSSES GRANT begins.

FARRAGUT and his men, who have waited so long for their prize money, will soon be able to rejoice over the spoils. The bill relating to the captures made by our fleet in the Mississippi River in 1862 has become law.

What do the two Senators from this State, Messrs. CONKLING and FENTON, intend to do about the resolution that has passed both Houses of the Legislature of this State, instructing them to vote for the repeal of the Tenure-of-Office act? Do they intend to obey?

Mr. ROBINSON wishes Ireland annexed to the United States. Is not the control that Ireland already exercises over us quite enough?

Five or six thousand gentlemen will to-morrow have their minds relieved of the anxiety to know whether GRANT intends to illustrate his Cabinet with their presence. For a month their souls have been racked, and during the past few days they have been in a state bordering upon distraction. One day more of madness and misery, and then they can sleep o' nights and mind their own business.

Through Baltimore have been sweeping immense crowds of people to take part in the inauguration ceremonies at Washington. Military bodies from many parts of the country, fire companies and all sorts of companies have marched through the city, gaily flouting their flags and beating their drums. What a contrast with eight years ago, when ABRAHAM LINCOLN was spirited through Baltimore, which waited for him sullenly with a drawn dagger in its hand.

It is not so easy to say how the Alabama claims should be settled as it is to say how they should not be settled. For instance, we should certainly not fight over them. And again, for example, we should not indulge in threats on their account.

Secretary MCCULLOCH puts forth to-day the last monthly statement of the public debt that it will be his fortune to issue. His exhibit shows a decrease in the debt during the past month of nearly eleven millions of dollars, while the coin in the Treasury is close upon ninety-nine millions of dollars.

If the Democrats wish to understand how they ought to behave themselves toward an Administration against which they will stand in the attitude of opposition, let them read the speech of Mr. DISRAELI, the leader of the English opposition, delivered at the opening of Parliament, (published yesterday.) Its good sense, its justice, its moderation, commend it as the model of an opposition party speech. Though defeated on the most vital issues, and prepared to give battle over principles not yet settled, he is none the less courteous and temperate in his language,—which is a circumstance to be studied by our furious Democratic leaders, whose malice of feeling and ferocity of speech is so terrible.

There is a great fuss in St. Louis over the fact that the managers of a lottery or "gift enterprise" have swindled the subscribers. It might have been supposed that the people of St. Louis would have learned something about these schemes from our experience of them in New-York.

A few days ago both Houses of the Legislature of this State passed a resolution instructing our Senators and requesting our Representatives in Congress to vote for the repeal of the Tenure-of-Office act. The vote of the Republican members was unanimous, and so also would have been the vote of the Democratic members but for the fact that the resolution contained passages that were politically obnoxious to them in other respects than its main object. The Tribune has been busily arguing that the Republicans of this State were opposed to the repeal of the law. Now it is mum on that point.

The "Monthly Report" of the Commissioner of Agriculture, Washington, is again before us, sixteen pages of which are appropriated, as usual, to "weather notes" and "meteorological observations," from individuals in all parts of the country. We desire to ask, with all due respect, what can be the immediate or the ultimate object of those stereotyped pages from month to month? They cost the Government thousands of dollars every year; and we have not been able to perceive that the Government, or the farmers, or gardeners, or any other class of citizens, have been or are likely to be benefited to the amount of one cent, or instructed in any possible way. We do hope the Commissioner will enlighten us on this subject. If there is anything practically valuable to any one in those pages the fact ought to be stated, and the public shown wherein it consists, so that there may be no doubt as to the object of such Report.

One MAURICE LANNIGAN was taken to the Tombs Police Court on Tuesday for having attempted a felonious assault. He turned out to be the same person who, a few years since, was convicted of the murder of his wife and sentenced to be hanged. His case, however, was heard by the Court of Appeals, and a new trial was ordered. LANNIGAN was then liberated on bail, and that ended the matter, the remembrance of which is only now revived by the new attempt at crime on the part of the unpunished murderer. Why did the second trial of LANNIGAN not take place? Who is at fault in the premises? This case is a striking commentary on the laxity of our Courts and the imperfections of our criminal code.

WESTON, the "walkist," is always challenging and offering to stake large sums of money; while, at the same time, he has a habit of bringing his walks suddenly to an end because he hasn't enough money to walk upon. It is only a few days since his "great walk" from somewhere to somewhere else, on which lots of money was bet, was abruptly terminated on account of the want of means to supply himself with victuals, and already he is out in the Buffalo papers challenging another "great walkist" thus: "I will walk against him for eight hundred dollars." It is a noble thing, we suppose, to be a "great walkist," and still more noble to be a "champion walkist," but if WESTON would only sit down and shut up for a little, we should admire him more than we do now.

Most of the objections put forward in the Senate against repealing the law that ties the hands, and obstructs the movement, and nullifies the power of President GRANT, will now pass away with the close of JOHNSON'S Administration. There is no danger now of Mr. JOHNSON castigating the Senate, (as WILSON feared he would,) or vetoing the repealing bill, or taking advantage of the few days of unrestrained power that he would have had by the repeal of the Tenure-of-Office act. The upholders of the straight-jacket law will now have to find other and different arguments from those they have heretofore urged.

With the life of Rev. Mr. TOWNSEND, of the Greenwich-street Asylum, ends the experiment of the Ragged Schools of New-York—the very nomenclature of which was enough to blast it, in a community like this. That word "ragged" is felt to be an offensive one, even in England, where it is the custom to hold the lower class of people in contempt, and give them servile ideas. Here it was an unhappy piece of plagiarism. To call schools "ragged" or "dirty" in this way is a mockery of charity. Charity in this part of the world should make the ragged children a little decent, and send them respectably into the common schools with the rest of the juveniles.

OBITUARY.

Viscount Gough.

A cable dispatch announces the death of Right Hon. HUGH GOUGH, K. P. G. C. B. Viscount GOUGH was a Field Marshal of the British army and had won great honors in the service. He was born in Limerick, Ireland, Nov. 3, 1779, and entered the army in 1794. In the following year he participated in the capture of the Cape of Good Hope, the Dutch fleet in Saldanha Bay. He next served in the West Indies, was present at the attack on Porto Rico and at the capture of Surinam. In 1809 he went to the Peninsula and commanded the Eighty-seventh Infantry at the battles of Talavera, Barossa, Vittoria and Nevelle, for which he received a cross. He also took an active part in the sieges of Cadis and Tariffa, and was severely wounded in the head. It was his regiment that at the battle of Barossa captured the eagle of the Eighth French regiment, and at Vittoria he secured the baton of the French Marshal JOURDAN. He was severely wounded a second time at Nevelle. In 1841-2 he commanded the land forces in China, and for the gallant manner in which he made the attack on Canton he was made a G. C. B., and when the campaign was concluded he was made a baronet. He was next dispatched to India, where, on the 29th of December, 1843, with the right wing of the army of the Gwallor he defeated a Mahratta force at Maharajpore and captured fifty-six guns. In 1845-6 he gained several victories over the Sheik army, for which services he received the thanks of both Houses of Parliament and was raised to the peerage. He also conducted the campaigns of 1848-9 against the Sheiks in their last desperate struggle, finally subduing his determined enemy, but at a great sacrifice of life. His skill and success won for him additional rank in the peerage, while the East India Company granted him an annual pension of £2,000 a year. Parliament granted a similar pension to him and his next two successors in the Viscountcy. Lord GEORGE was Colonel of the Royal Horse Guards, Colonel-in-chief of the Sixtieth Royal Rifles, Colonel of the London Irish Volunteer Rifles, a Knight of St. Patrick, of the Star of India, and of St. Charles of Spain, and a Privy Councillor.

Fine Arts.

SALE OF THE EFFECTS OF THE LATE MR. LEUTZE.

This evening a very interesting and important sale of paintings, objects of art, curiosities, books, &c., belonging to the late Mr. LEUTZE, will commence at the auction rooms of Messrs. LEAVITT, STREBEIGH & CO., Clinton Hall, for the benefit of the family of the deceased artist. The collection of paintings embraces many from the artist's own hand, and a large number contributed by brother artists. There are, besides, several very interesting specimens of antique carved furniture, curiously ornamented guns of the very earliest manufacture, cross-bows, spear-heads, battle-axes, daggers, swords, and articles of ancient costume, most of which are of great value as curiosities and as artistic property. Among the books are some rare editions of illustrated works not often found in private libraries in this country. The collection is well worthy of the attention it attracts.

At the same sale several admirable water-colors by the English artist, WILLIAM L. THOMAS, will be disposed of. These works were on exhibition at the National Academy of Design a year ago, and attracted great attention, being among the best of the pictures exhibited.

The sale will be continued to-morrow night.

The City Chamberlain, Mr. PETER B. SWEENEY, reports that for the month of February last, he has paid into the City Treasury, as interest on moneys belonging to the City and County in his custody, the sum of $4,674 58, and this amount added to deposits of a similar character heretofore made by the Chamberlain, makes a grand total of $116,157 03, which has been accredited to this account.

Gen. Aringo's Surrender to the Government Denied—Fresh Arrivals of Troops—The American Council's Clerk Released.

HAVANA, Wednesday, March 3.

The Voz de Cuba (newspaper) denies the report, recently published in the Diario, of the surrender of the revolutionary Gen. ARINGO, pronouncing the story impossible and untrue. The Diario has lately become exceedingly sensational.

The steamer Morro Castle, from New-York, arrived this morning.

The Spanish man-of-war Cadiz arrived here to-day from Spain with 1,000 fresh troops.

Orders have been issued for the release of JOHN M. UTLEY, Consular Clerk in the American Consul-General's office. Mr. UTLEY has been in prison for nearly a month, not for any political offence, but on account of some trouble with a coachman.

The American brig J. D. Lincoln, which was detained here for taking cargo at Sierra Morena after that port was closed by DULCE's proclamation, finally obtained a clearance at the intercession of the American Consul.

Mr. UTLEY and Señors SANZEA, LEON ROSAS, CUBIAS, PINTADO and TRITA, and five other prisoners claiming American citizenship, have been released.

The flagship Contoocook is here. Admiral HOFF is making active exertions for the protection of American citizens.

Reinforcements are being sent to the interior by railroad.

The steamer Montezuma has sailed for Nuevitas and other ports, taking $50,000 to pay the troops, and munitions of war.

A ship has been chartered to take 300 rebels to Fernando Po.

The Banco announces by authority that it will hereafter limit exchange of notes for gold to sums of $10.

The Government is advertising for horses and mules for the army.

The Bishop of Havana has offered a sixth of his income for three months for the support of the volunteers, and the Cathedral clergy have followed his example with one-tenth of their salaries. The religious brotherhoods are subscribing for the same object. A correspondent of the Prensa urges the Government to sequestrate the property of absent rebels.

Advices from Sagua report that the rebels on Saturday last tore up the railroad to that city, stopped a train of cars, mutilated the engine, and made prisoners of the engineer and railroad employes.

The Cuban rebels at Nassau are very active. It was reported that a steamer with a cargo of arms and crowded with men arrived at Ragged Island, on the 16th ult., on her way to Cuba

An insurgent General has been captured and taken to Sagua la Grande, where he has been sentenced to be shot.

Commander SPENCER HUNTLEY, of the British war steamer Cherub, was recently drowned at Nassau by the upsetting of a boat in the surf.

Arrival of the Steamship Bienville—Later Mail News from the Ever-Faithful Isle.

By the arrival at this port of the steamship Bienville, from Havana, Feb. 26, and by the courtesy of Purser ALEXANDER, we are in receipt of Cuban news later by two days than that already at hand. The corps known as the Chasseurs de Camancas, and numbering some 600 men, had arrived from Spain. An expedition of 1,000 men had departed for Cienfuegos; Gen. PUELLO was in command. Reports from Santiago de Cuba set forth no change in the situation. The insurgents were still devastating the district.

GEN. SHERMAN.

Presentation of a Residence to Lieut.-Gen. Sherman by New-York Merchants.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, March 3.

This morning, between 11 and 12 o'clock, Messrs. A. T. STEWART, HAMILTON FISH, BENJAMIN H. FIELD, WILLIAM H. ASPINWALL and WILLIAM SCOTT, of the Committee appointed by the subscribers in New-York to the fund for the purchase of a residence and furniture for Lieut.-Gen. SHERMAN, attended by ALFRED M. HOYT, nephew of Gen. SHERMAN, Gen. BUTTERFIELD, Judge HILTON, SOLON HUMPHREY, also of the contributors, visited the army headquarters by appointment. On entering Gen. GRANT's office, Mr. STEWART approached him, and informed him that they had come prepared to consummate the purchase of his residence and furniture on I-street, for the purpose of presenting the same to Gen. SHERMAN, and at the same time handed to Gen. GRANT a check for $65,000. The General received the gentlemen cordially, and expressed his great gratification at Gen. SHERMAN's being the recipient of such a high mark of friendly consideration. The General then produced a deed of the house and bill of sale for the furniture, handsomely engrossed on parchment, signed and acknowledged for record, and bearing the requisite signatures of Gen. GRANT and his wife. This being completed it was evident the parties met as business men to finish the business with which they were intrusted. After a short interview with Gen. SHERMAN, who was attending to his duties at a desk in the same room while the Committee were engaged with Gen. GRANT, the Chairman, Mr. STEWART, made known their desire to have a private interview. Gen. SHERMAN then invited the Committee to an adjoining room usually occupied by Gen. RAWLINGS, Chief-of-Staff, when Mr. STEWART, holding in his hand the subscription papers and deed and bill of sale, addressed Gen. SHERMAN as follows:

GENERAL: It is a great pleasure to me to be the medium of presenting this voluntary subscription of your friends and fellow-countrymen. If there was ever an instance of the pleasure being greater to give than to receive, this is certainly that one. I assure you that this may be accepted without any feeling of obligation on your part, as it is contributed in the sincere belief that your noble and effective services in behalf of our country in her hour of peril can never be compensated. We trust that the kind Providence who has in the past watched over, guided and protected you, on the battle-field and in the camp, may bless you with a long life, that you may enjoy the reward of a faithful public servant from a free and happy people.

Mr. STEWART then handed Gen. SHERMAN the subscription list and deed and bill of sale, remarking that the balance of subscription, now amounting to nearly $100,000, would be forwarded to him within a few days, and after the names shall have been obtained of a few gentlemen who desire to contribute; adding that a portion of this sum had been subscribed by Gen. SHERMAN's friends in Boston, whose names would be added to the list.

Gen. SHERMAN seemed much affected, and in replying to the speech of Mr. STEWART, said:

That this noble act of kindness was entirely unexpected by him until within a few days past; that in view of his coming to Washington he had been engaged in making arrangements for living here in a manner proportionate to his income, and in an humble but modest style. Of course this gift would enable him to live in a different manner than he had contemplated; that he assured the gentlemen that it should be held by him for the special benefit of his family and the education of his children; that beyond this purpose he intended never to touch himself, one dollar of it, and that apart from this he desired the contributors to understand that he should always be happy to welcome them in what might be regarded as their house, while visiting Washington, in order that he might know them and they know him more intimately, and that he could not further express his grateful sense of their kindness so unexpected and so generously accorded to him.

He then shook hands with all present. Mr. STEWART, while holding his hand, said that he desired to add one further remark, which was, that to no one were they more indebted in this undertaking than to Gen. BUTTERFIELD, whose energy and earnestness had contributed largely to its successful completion.

The Committee, after a brief and pleasant conversation for a few minutes, withdrew.

THE INDIAN WAR.

Summary of Recent Events in the Indian Territory—The Indians Going South.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Wednesday, March 3.

A letter in the Republican, dated Camp Supply, Indian Territory, Feb. 14, gives the following account of affairs in the Indian country:

"I left Gen. SHERIDAN's headquarters on the morning of the 10th inst., en route for Gen. CARR's camp, located on the San Francisco Creek, a tributary of the north fork of the Canadian River. On the night previous to my leaving, Gen. CUSTER returned from his fruitless search for the Cheyenne camp, near the mouth of Medicine Bluff Creek, at the eastern extremity of the Wachita Mountains, about 165 miles west, finding trails fresh, and all the Indians going rapidly south and west toward the headwaters of the Red River and the 'Staked Plains.' There are now about two hundred lodges of Cheyennes, ninety lodges of Arrapahoes and sixty lodges of Comanches on the war-path, together with a few Plain Apaches, and a few Kaws and the Dog soldiers, under 'Fall Ball,' chief of the land, numbering in all about one thousand warriors. Gen. CUSTAR is now under orders to move west with his regiment, the Seventh U. S. Cavalry; and the Nineteenth Kansas Volunteers, under Col. CRAWFORD, to Elm Fork of the Red River, scouting the country from the head waters of that creek. Gen. E. A. CARR is to move south, locating his supply depot on the main Canadian River, near the 101st meridian o' west longitude, moving thence south. Col. EVANS moves also south from his present command on Monument Creek, near the 100th meridian, on the Canadian River, having under his command the Third United States Cavalry and a small detachment of the Thirtieth Infantry, while Col. BROOTH marches from the west toward the same region, drawing his supplies from Fort Stanton. The intention of the General commanding is to drive the hostile savages toward one common centre, until one or all of the command can reach and chastise them as they deserve, or compel a surrender or submit to a settlement on their reservation on the terms proposed by the Government. Major INMAN, Assistant Quartermaster, is now en route to Gen. SHERIDAN's new supply department, located at the mouth of Sweetwater Creek, a tributary of the Elm fork of the Red River, with a train of two hundred and fifty wagons loaded with forage, subsistance stores, supplies for Gen. CUSTAR's command are being rapidly forwarded from Forts Arbuckle and Gibson; and the Indian campaign must be brought to a close within the next two months. It is to be hoped that this may be final. When the Indians are taught what every army officer must learn, subordination to proper authority, then, and not till then, will hostilities cease. The Tenth United States Cavalry, under Major KIDD, is to be stationed at the new post to be established near the mouth of Medicine Bluff Creek, in the Klou and Comanche Reservation, with good animals, ready to strike the Indians whenever they leave their Reservation.

Woman Suffrage in Wisconsin—Attempted Bribery in the Illinois Legislature.

CHICAGO, Wednesday, March 3.

Last night the Wisconsin Senate, by a vote of 21 to 6, indefinitely postponed the House bill proposing to submit to the people in 1870 the question of extending suffrage to women.

This morning, by a vote of 62 to 29, the Constitutional Amendment was ratified in the Assembly.

A sensation was created in Springfield this morning by Representative MUNSON's announcement in the Illinois House that, as Chairman of the Printing Committee, he had been offered $400 as a bribe, $200 of which he handed to the Clerk.

Col. JOHN VAN HORN, an ex-Alderman of this city, was arrested last night for shooting at his two daughters, one of whom he slightly wounded. He was to-day held to bail in the sum of $5,000 to keep the peace.

[Late Australian Intelligence.

SAN FRANCISCO, Wednesday, March 3.

Two weeks' later Australian dates have been received by sailing vessels. The commercial news is uninteresting. The reply of the Sydney Chamber of Commerce to the Melbourne Chamber of Commerce for a Customs Union was not considered conclusive. Further steps are to be taken.

Preparations for a Northern Territory expedition were proceeding rapidly. Recruits were offering freely for the New-Zealand service.

The excitement over the recent massacre is intense. The war is being conducted vigorously. Fifty-seven of the enemy had been killed by friendly Maoris in the recent battle.

It is stated that there is good reason to believe that the letters supposed to have been written by the King advising an uprising of the tribes, were not authentic.

Mauritius advices confirm the reported deficiency in the sugar crop.

Arizona intelligence to Feb. 1 states that the Apaches were committing depredations in every direction, and that the troops were unable to pursue them on account of the bad condition of the roads.

Miscellaneous Telegrams.

PROVIDENCE, March 3.—FRANK DE BLOIS, aged nine years, was drowned in a pond in Newport yesterday. About the same time two carpenters fell from the roof of a building owned by the father of young DE BLOIS. One of them, JOHN CLARKE, received injuries which will probably prove fatal. The other, WILLIAM CARPENTER, was less seriously injured.

BOSTON, March 3.—The bark Hala Frank, of Boston, from Portland for Buenos Ayres, before reported abandoned, was towed into Gloucester harbor last night, apparently in good order, with the exception of a leak. Capt. MERRILL, although deserted by the crew, remained by his vessel, and saw her safely into port.

PHILADELPHIA, March 3.—A Committee of the City Council, the BAXTER's Fire Zouaves, National Guards, Wiccacoe Legion, Good Will Engine, Harmony Engine, Taylor Hose and Republican Invincibles, have left the city for Washington to-day, to attend the inauguration.

PORTLAND, Me., March 3.—The steamship North American sailed at 3 o'clock this morning for Liverpool, via Londonderry, having been detained since Saturday for the Canadian mails, the train having been delayed by immense snowdrifts above Island Pond. Some of the drifts are reported to be thirty feet in depth.

TRENTON, N. J., March 3.—The bill to abolish transit duties on railroads and canals passing through this State was to-day passed by the Senate unanimously. It was sent to the House, where prompt passage is expected.

DETROIT, Mich., March 2.—The Democratic State Convention met at Lansing to-day, and nominated G. D. HUGHES, of Marshall, for Justice of the Supreme Court. The informal ballot stood—HUGHES 65, COOLEY 52, GREEN 7. COOLEY is the Republican nominee. On the first formal ballot HUGHES' nomination was made unanimous.

WORCESTER, Mass., March 3.—The examination of PYKE, the alleged wife-poisoner, at Fitchburg, was to-day, at the request of the Attorney-General, again postponed until the 24th inst.

CHICAGO, Ill., March 3.—Yesterday afternoon the Illinois Senate passed Mr. FULLER's Restrictive Railroad bill. As the railroad men make no objection, its passage by the House is certain.

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 3.—W. E. SMITH and ABRAHAM CLARKE, of New-York City, were arrested here to-day, charged with forging a check on the New-York and Erie Bank. The charter elections in Erie County have resulted the same as last year. There is a Republican majority of three in the County Board of Supervisors.

WHEELING, W. Va., March 3.—The West Virginia Legislature ratified the Suffrage amendment to the Constitution to-day.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., March 3.—At a meeting of the Vessel Owners' Association to-day it was resolved that during 1869 freights will not be carried east of Cape Cod for less than $2 50 per ton, and to Rhode Island for less than $2 per ton.

SALEM, Mass., March 3.—NED O'BALDWIN, the Irish Giant, was bailed out to-day by JAMES D. SHEA, of Boston, and two other gentlemen.

TRENTON, N. J., March 3.—The attempt to put all the special applications for charters for insurance companies under a special law, failed to-day in the House. The Transit Duty bill, reducing the per capita tax and duty on freight on the Camden and Amboy Railroads, and substituting a tax upon the Companies, passed the Senate and House to-day. The Governor will veto the bill to incorporate the Champion Base Ball Club of Jersey City.

DETROIT, Mich., March 3.—The claim of CHAS. HOWARD, for $250,000, against the Detroit and Milwaukee Railroad Company, was to-day decided in favor of the defendants, in the Circuit Court. The case was commenced in 1863 by the plaintiff for work performed in the construction of a portion of the railroad now occupied by the defendants. The case will probably be carried to the Supreme Court.

AUGUSTA, Me., March 3.—The House refused, by a vote of 93 to 25, to pass the resolution instructing our Senators and Representatives in Congress to urge the reëstablishment of the Reciprocity Treaty between the United States and the British Provinces.

The announcement of the death of Gen. WYMAN B. S. MOORE was premature. He is very sick, in Virginia, but not dead.

HUDSON, N. Y. March 3.—The election for town officers in Columbia County took place yesterday, and resulted in the election of thirteen Democratic and seven Republican Supervisors—a Democratic gain of one in the Board. The political lines were very closely drawn, and the contest a most exciting one.

SHIPWRECK OFF NANTUCKET.

Loss of a New-York Ship on the Shoals—Two of the Crew Drowned and Two Frozen to Death—Terrible Suffering of the Survivors.

From Our Own Correspondent.

BOSTON, Tuesday, March 2, 1869.

Intelligence of the loss of the ship Harry Bluff, of New-York, Capt. OLIVER, on Nantucket Shoals, on Saturday last, together with a portion of her crew, is received here by the arrival of the brig Clara Jenkins, Capt. GILKEY, with the survivors. They tell a thrilling story of their perils and sufferings.

According to this the Harry Bluff sailed from Cadiz on the 16th of last January for Boston, with a cargo of 1,200 tons of salt and 300 casks of wine, and a crew of thirteen negroes and three or four white boys. After passing the Western Islands she encountered a succession of strong gales and high seas, and after a while intense cold weather. In the midst of this she sprung aleak, and it was found necessary to keep one pump going most of the time to keep her free from water. Thus the Captain managed to wear her toward the port for which she was bound until the South Shoal of Nantucket was reached. Here, a few minutes before midnight on Friday night she struck, and thumped on the hard sand in a manner to threaten her instant destruction. But, at length, she was worked free of the shoal, and anchored in thirteen fathoms of water. She then began to leak at a serious rate, and was soon nearly full of water. Her cargo of salt in the lower hold began to dissolve, and therefore, to prevent her from becoming top heavy, the crew were put to work to shovel the salt that was stowed between decks into the hold. But all their labor was useless, and at about 10 o'clock on Saturday morning, it was thought best to abandon the vessel, she then having sixteen feet of water in the hold, and preparations were made accordingly.

And then the real sufferings of the men began. While attempting to launch the jolly-boat two of the crew fell into the sea and were drowned, and the boat was upset and rendered useless. Their names were W. SCHOLIS, of Nova Scotia, and T. SHORT, of Fall River. The officers and the remainder of the crew then succeeded in safely launching the longboat, and taking a small supply of provisions and some water, together with the seamen's clothing, got clear of the ship. There was a heavy sea on at the time, and to prevent the boat from swamping two bags of clothing belonging to the Captain were thrown overboard and used as a drag to steady it. But these were finally lost, and they got along as best they could without them, having many narrow escapes from drowning all together. During the following night they suffered keenly from the biting cold. The wind blew almost a gale from the northwest, freezing the flying spray as it swept over the men. At one time they passed so near a vessel as to plainly see men walking on her decks, but having no means of making a signal in the dark, and the sounds of the sea drowning the sound of their voices, they were passed by unobserved. They all began to despair of rescue. Every hour the danger of freezing to death increased and their sufferings grew almost unbearable. At last one seaman died, he was frozen to death. This was about two o'clock on Sunday morning. Two hours after another died; he, also, was frozen to death. Each one began to feel that death would not be long in reaching them all. At length another vessel was seen. She was signaled. The signal was answered and they were saved.

When taken on board of the ship, which was the Clara Jenkins, as above stated, the men were almost helpless. They had been exposed for nearly twenty-four hours in their open boat, and were badly frost-bitten in their hands and other exposed parts of their bodies. When the brig was coming up our harbor she was boarded by the revenue tug Hamlin by Collector RUSSEL, who had heard of her arrival below; and when he saw the condition of the rescued crew, he had them transferred directly to the Marine Hospital at Chelsea, without going through the usual forms. There they are now receiving every attention, and doubtless the lives of all will be saved notwithstanding their critical condition. The names of those frozen to death were JOHN BROWN, cook, colored, of Baltimore, and JOHN AUSTIN, colored, of the West Indies.

Capt. OLIVER gives the following as the particulars of the loss of his ship:

"The ship struck on Great Rip at midnight of Friday, Sancoty Head bearing north-northwest; wore ship and stood to the southward; saw breakers ahead; wore ship again, and stood north, intending to run over the north part of the shoal to get into deep water, but was obliged to wear again—breakers all round—Sancoty Light bearing northwest by west; the ship struck again very heavy and continued for half an hour; the ship then drifted over the shoal into thirteen fathoms of water; let go both anchors and paid out all the chain, the ship filling fast, and all hands at the pumps; the ship continuing to drift, cut away mainmast, the mizzenmast going with it, when she brought up. In a short time the water was up to the between decks, and the ship listing to port, the water being over the main rail and even with the hatch; got out the longboat and left the ship, intending to hold on the stern until assistance came from the shore, but the tide running so strong was unable to reach the ship again."

The Captain speaks very warmly of the kindness of Capt. GILKEY of the brig by which he and his crew were rescued, and also of the attention and hospitality of the Collector. The cargo of salt and wine on board of the wrecked ship was insured in this city for $28,000 in the following offices: The Neptune, $19,000; Merchants, $6,000, Boylston, $3,000. The latter also had $1,000 on the Captain's personal effects, which were in the two bags used as a drag in the longboat, which were lost overboard.

MUNROE.

The Louisiana Congressmen.

From the New-Orleans Times, Feb. 27.

We observe that the several gentlemen elected to the Forty-first Congress, to wit, Messrs. MCCRAINE, BAILEY and RYAN, of the Third, Fourth and Fifth Districts, are in the city, on their way to Washington, to attend the opening of the Forty-first Congress. These gentlemen all have certificates of their election from Gov. WARMOUTH Mr. HUNT, elected from the Second District, is in Washington, prosecuting his claim to his seat. He has no certificate, that having been given to Col. SHELDON, who, on the popular vote, fell behind some twelve thousand votes. In a district polling some 20,000 he received not 400 white votes, and is certified as the representative of the wealthiest district in Louisiana, and that in which there is the largest number of white citizens.

This result has been brought about by the exclusion of the whole vote of the City of New-Orleans, which constitutes four-fifths of the vote of the district. This exclusion has been made upon some idle technicality, or upon general allegation of frauds and intimidation of voters. This latter ground is that upon which Mr. ST. MARTIN's claim to his seat from the First has been disputed by Gen. STEELE. Leaving out the City of New-Orleans, Mr. ST. MARTIN still has a majority, but it is charged that many negroes voted for him under duress. Testimony has been taken on this subject in this city, which reveals the fact that the whole pretext of the employment of menaces against the negroes is a sheer invention and fabrication of the carpet-baggers.

The Peabody Educational Fund.

The Houston (Texas) Union publishes the following reply from Rev. Dr. BARNAS SEARS to a letter from a gentleman in that city, inquiring why Texas was not admitted to the benefits of the Peabody Southern Educational Fund:

STAUNTON, Feb. 9, 1869.

MY DEAR SIR: By the express direction of Mr. PEABODY, the trustees of the Peabody Educational Fund are accountable to no one for their decisions; no States or individuals have any claims upon the benefits of the fund. I have no right, as agent of the trustees, to explain the reasons or motives of their actions. They might choose to say nothing, or to speak for themselves. My personal convictions, which I am willing to give you, is that Kentucky, Missouri and Texas were passed over because they suffered less from the effects of the war than other Southern States. It was to this latter class of States, most devastated by the war, that the aid furnished by Mr. PEABODY was intended to be given.

Very respectfully,
B. SEARS, General Agent.

OLYMPIC THEATRE.

"Humpty Dumpty" may soon be called the "Methuseleh" of the drama. Last night this entertaining hero was represented for the four hundredth time at the Olympic Theatre. The receipts of the box-office on this interesting occasion were within very few dollars of a thousand. Few plays which have attained notable "runs" in New-York have maintained such an even prosperity as this pantomime. "Uncle Tom" and the "Black Crook" are still ahead of "Humpty Dumpty" in respect of the number of representations, but those, we believe, are the only predecessors whom that hero of pantomime has to surpass, to take the lead among the great successes of the New-York stage. Only three members of the original cast, we are told, continue to represent the identical characters in which they appeared upon the first night of the piece—Mr. GEORGE FOX, Mlle. SANGALI and Mr. C. K. FOX! This trio have never been absent a night nor a matinée from their duties, and for four hundred times, through August heats and January frosts, they have pursued their diverting performances. Is it possible for an actor to assume a part for four hundred times without becoming more or less afflicted with it in his dreams and his sober life? It does not seem so; nor, indeed, does it appear as if they could ever wholly throw off the habits of their oft-repeated rôles. Habit, we are assured, becomes second nature. In that event it is frightful to contemplate the hereafter of the entertaining performers whom we have named above; what amount of pecuniary reward can reconcile Mr. FOX to a perpetual existence of chalk and broad grins of idiocy and stuffed bricks, or Mlle. SANGALI to an uninterrupted future of simpers and pirouettes?

VARIOUS DRAMATIC NOTES.

The manager of the Bowery Theatre has been six months preparing a pantomime which is to be brought out on next Monday night. It is called "The Seven Dwarfs," and a select company of notabilities has been invited to a full rehearsal of the piece, to take place on Sunday evening next.

Mlle. ZOE is playing this week at the Broadway Theatre in two dramas, "The French Spy" and "The Wept of the Wish-ton-Wish." Her benefit is announced for Friday evening. Miss REIGNOLDS' engagement begins on Monday next.

Some time ago it was announced that Mr. SOTHERN would come to Booth's Theatre in the Fall of this year. Then it was stated that Mr. SOTHERN had reconsidered his intention. Now we hear that Miss BATEMAN has signed an engagement to appear at Booth's, which covers Mr. SOTHERN's time; her opening night being fixed for Sept. 20.

Miss EFFIE GERMON has been engaged at Wallack's Theatre, and will make an early début in the new comedy of "School." Mr. O. MARLOWE has been engaged to appear in the same piece.

Mr. BROUGHAM's new simplification of SHAKESPEARE, which he calls "Much Ado About a Merchant of Venice," is to be produced on Monday next.

The eldest son of JOSEPH JEFFERSON—CHARLES—a young fellow of 18, and the image of his father, exhibits taste and talents for the stage, and will no doubt astonish his parent and the public one of these days. The JEFFERSONS and WARRENS are the oldest theatrical families of the American stage, and the foothight fever appears to be hereditary.

Mr. A. H. DAVENPORT, the former New-York favorite, has organized a company to travel through the large towns of Missouri, with Mlle. TOURNOUR—a female gymnast of 15—as the star.

Miss MARRIOTT, the English actress, and Mr. CATHCART, who was over here with the KEANS, are to follow the FLORENCES at Wood's Museum.

Condition of Migaldo.

Our reporter yesterday visited the murderer, RINALDO MIGALDO, who is now lying in the hospital of the Sing Sing Prison, suffering from the effects of an unsuccessful attempt to commit suicide by cutting his throat. Our readers will remember that the convict made the attempt on Wednesday, the 24th ult., just before leaving his cell in the Tombs to go to State Prison with a Deputy Sheriff. When the parties had reached their destination the condition of the prisoner was discovered. The wound in his throat, inflicted by a piece of window-glass, and carefully bound up with a white neck-cloth, to prevent it being seen, had bled very freely, and MIGALDO was thought to be dying. Upon close examination of the gashes on the neck, it was seen that they had not reached the jugular vein, and the case was, therefore, not without hope. The best of surgical aid was provided, and under the most careful attention the man is speedily recovering, the probability being that in a few days he will be able to work. He at first declined to speak on the subject of the attempted self-destruction to the prison officials, but yielded at length, and now freely converses with those whom he knows. He pretends to be sorry for the act, and says that he would not have done it but for the fact that he dreaded so much, on first thought, the horrors of a life-long imprisonment. He is closely watched by the keepers, who never leave his bedside, as it is feared by them that if opportunity offers he will make another effort to end his life.

Arrest of an Alleged Incendiary.

Yesterday afternoon Detectives IRVING and COYLE, of the Central Police Office, arrested one JOHN H. BOTTS in a billiard saloon in Fourth-avenue, upon a charge of having fired a dwelling-house in Stamford, Conn., on last Thursday night. The complaint upon which the arrest was ordered was made by Fire Marshal JACOBS, of Stamford, and it is also alleged that the accused has fired a number of houses in that city and its vicinity, causing wide-spread alarm and some considerable pecuniary loss. The prisoner, however, professed to be entirely innocent, and declared himself ready to return at once to Connecticut without waiting for the requisition of Gov. ENGLISH, which had been issued, but had not yet arrived, and without which he could not be legally removed from the State. As he waived his rights, he was last evening taken to Stamford by Detective IRVING and delivered to the authorities of that city.

Capture of a Notorious Swindler.

Hundreds of persons throughout the United States will be pleased to hear of the capture and punishment of the notorious swindler, Rev. Mr. WOODS, alias Mason, alias Taylor, &c., &c., who for the past few years has been living handsomely on the credulity of honest people.

His arrest was effected at Worcester, Mass., about a week ago, and was brought about by the publication in the NEW-YORK TIMES of the villain's doings in this City. WOOD, it appears, left New-York immediately after our exposition of the manner in which he had cheated the proprietor of Sweeny's Hotel, and the firm of Messrs. P. C. BARNUM & Co., clothiers, by false representations. He took up his march for Boston, stopping on the way at various places, and in each instance he duped hotel-keepers and others out of various sums of money. At Worcester he swindled the proprietor of the Bay State Hotel, who, after his departure, read our description of him, and, by means of the telegraph, caught him before he had proceeded much further. He was convicted and sentenced to serve the State for two years in the work-house. According to the latest accounts, he is now endeavoring to deceive the authorities by preaching every Sunday to the other prisoners, and pretending in many ways that he is a Christian man, who has been wrongly condemned. He is thus endeavoring to secure his pardon from the Governor, but it is likely that the New-Yorkers who have suffered from his pranks will spoil his little game by presenting to the Executive, in a few days, the real history of the arrant swindler, whose clever performances have given him a national reputation. The Police of Rochester will claim him for trial as soon as the present term shall have been served, and then others will follow, perhaps until the close of his infamous life.

The Murderer Real.

The fate of the murderer, JOHN REAL, seems now to have been settled beyond peradventure, as it is generally understood that a direct appeal, recently made to Gov. HOFFMAN by the most influential friends of the prisoner for a commutation of sentence, has utterly failed. The Governor is reported to have said to the parties who waited upon him on that errand that he had been Mayor of New-York long enough to know that the worst thing that could possibly be done at this juncture would be to interfere with the course of the law in this case. REAL received the announcement very coolly, it is said, and told a visitor yesterday that he felt certain of escaping. He said that he had suffered enough already for his crime, and added that his friends thought so, too, and that the most influential politician in the City was working with the Governor in his behalf. It is stated by those familiar with the Sheriff's Office that O'BRIEN will not hang his "pet," but will absent himself from the scene of the execution, and allow the Under Sheriff to do the work.

New Railroad Route to and from Sharon and Lebanon Springs.

A railroad will be completed by July 1 from Cobleskill to Sharon, in connection with the Albany and Susquehanna Railroad. Passengers, and especially invalids, will appreciate the comforts of a passage up the Hudson by daylight to Albany, landing near the depot, and thence proceeding without change of "broad-gauge cars" to Sharon, thus avoiding the long and tedious up-hill ride by coach. Returning, the day boats will be reached without the necessity of leaving Sharon at an unseasonable hour in the morning. By the completion of the Lebanon Springs Railroad, visitors to Lebanon and the White Mountains can avail themselves of a new and comfortable route by day boats to and from Hudson.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

New-York.

A German aged about 24 years, and about five and a half feet in height, at an early hour yesterday morning was found lying insensible on the sidewalk in Houston-street, between Mott and Elizabeth. He was removed by the Police to Bellevue Hospital, where the Surgeon declared that he was under the influence of poison, and that there is little chance of his recovery. When found he was respectably dressed in dark coat and pants, black velvet vest, blue necktie, black hat and gaiters, but there was nothing upon the person by which his identity could be established.

The Homœopathic Medical College had its ninth commencement at the rooms of the Historical Society yesterday evening. Degrees were conferred on twenty-four graduates, and addresses were made by Rev. Dr. TYNG, Dr. CHAS. J. MANSFIELD and Prof. F. W. HUNT.

The Union League Club have ordered a salute in Madison-square at the hour of the inauguration, and calcium lights and music on the balconies of the Club-house in the evening.

The safety deposit companies established in this City have proved to be so useful and so prosperous that their number is increasing. The banks are connecting such establishments with their regular business, and offer inducements to all who have valuables to be stored. The National Park Bank have a safe deposit vault in their banking building of ample dimensions, well lighted and ventilated, and accommodation of their dealers and others. Perfect safety is promised to all who place anything there for safe keeping.

At a meeting of the Eighth Assembly District German Republican Club, last night, resolutions were adopted condemning the bill introduced into Congress by Senator FRELINGHUYSEN, relating to the naturalization of foreigners.

The Old School Presbyterian Assembly will meet at Dr. SPRING's church, corner of Fifth-avenue and Thirty-seventh-street, on the third Thursday of May. The New-School Assembly will meet in this City at the same time. These Conventions are looked forward to with much interest, as it is believed a union will be effected by the two branches of the Church.

The Fire Commissioners held their regular weekly meeting yesterday morning. The report of Chief Engineer KINGSLAND for February shows that there were 62 fires during that month.

The Board of Police Commissioners at their meeting yesterday, considered the petition of the citizens of the Twelfth Ward of Brooklyn, for the formation of a new Police Precinct within the boundaries of that Ward. No definite conclusion was reached, but it is thought that the request of the petitioners will be granted.

Officer REVEILLE, of the Third Precinct, during Tuesday night discovered two burglars attempting to force their way into the premises No. 304 Washington-street. They fled at his approach, and were not arrested.

Yesterday morning the Police found under Pier No. 48, North River, a small boat containing six bags of cotton, which are presumed to have been stolen.

A concert will be given by the members of the New-York Harmonic Society, in St. John's M. E. Church, Fifty-third-street, near Broadway, this (Thursday) evening, for the benefit of the Sabbath School.

Deputy Marshal THOMPSON received a pardon to-day from the President, for BROCKWAY, who was convicted of counterfeiting some time ago, and sentenced to the Albany Penitentiary for fifteen years.

A general Committee meeting of the Manhattan circles of the Fenian Brotherhood was held at their central headquarters, No. 823 Broadway, last evening, at which it was decided to give a public reception to the released patriots, WARREN and COSTELLO, upon their arrival. No definite plans were determined on, except the selection of the place, at Cooper Institute Hall.

Yesterday afternoon the Trustees of the College of the City of New-York held a meeting, RICHARD L. LARREMORE, Esq., presiding. The venerable President of the College, Prof. HORACE WEBSTER, D. D., LL.D., offered his resignation, giving as a reason his advanced age. The resignation was accepted with expressions of regret, and Prof. WEBSTER was requested to continue in office until a successor shall have been appointed.

Last evening a quarrel occurred in the saloon No. 197 South-street, in which MICHAEL DONOVAN was struck on the head with a shovel by JAMES SMITH, and severely wounded over the eye. SMITH was arrested and locked up in the Oak-street Station-house.

Mrs. ELIZA HINLEY, of No. 659 Third-avenue, was on a visit yesterday afternoon in Brooklyn, and being taken with a fit was placed in a carriage to be taken home, but died before reaching there. The Coroner's office was notified.

A fire occurred last evening in the apartments of NUGENT HOFFMAN, on first floor of No. 169 Suffolk-street, doing a damage of $200 to furniture. Insured for $1,000 in the Relief Insurance Company.

New-Jersey.

Coroner WHITE, of Hoboken, commenced an inquest yesterday on the body of a young American girl, ANNA SMITH, who had committed suicide the evening previous by taking an ounce of Paris green. She resided as a domestic in a family in Hudson City, and was noticed on Wednesday last to be unusually despondent. On being asked the reason, she admitted having taken a dose of Paris green. A doctor was called in as soon as possible, an antidote given and the girl was hurried off to St. Mary's Hospital, in Hoboken, where death ensued within a few hours. A broken love engagement is supposed to have been the cause of the committal of the act.

PETER HOCH, a German working in the Danforth locomotive shop, Paterson, was run over yesterday, by an eastward bound train while cr

REAL ESTATE PROCEEDINGS.

The usual crowd assembled yesterday at the Exchange Salesrooms, and the bidding was quite as spirited as any day this week.

West Side lots are in great demand, and although the market offers almost daily excellent lots, located anywhere between Sixtieth and One Hundred and Seventieth streets, and from Broadway to the North River, yet, contrary to the rules which govern all other markets, the demand increases with the supply. It seems almost impossible to get ground enough to satisfy the eager purchasers. Four lots on on Sixty-second-street, between the Boulevard and Eighth-avenue, 23x100.5, were sold by JAMES M. MILLER. They were started at $7,500, but ran up with great rapidity and were sold at $14,550 each. There were very many bidders and the purchaser was fortunate in securing them even at that price. Four lots on Seventy-second-street, west of Broadway, 25x76, were promptly sold at $6,300 each, and four others, 25x70, west of and adjoining these, brought $5,750 each.

Remembering the amount of money which must be expended in opening streets, grading, paving, &c. &c., the prices paid for up-town lots seem most extravagant. The easy terms on which they are purchased doubtless adds to the price and makes them sell at much higher rate than they otherwise would. In the most cases but 10 ₱ cent. is required to be paid on the day of sale; 20 or 30 ₱ cent. more within sixty days, and 60 or 70 ₱ cent. is allowed to remain on mortgage for from three to five years. This keeps alive the spirit of speculation. Many lots sold on these terms are resold within three or four months from the time of purchase, and the purchaser realizes a very handsome profit from the increased value.

The Westchester property sold by Messrs. A. J. BLEECKER, SON & Co. also brought stiff prices. These lots seemed to be bought by persons residing in the neighborhood, who desired to improve them. The faces were generally strange, not those who frequent the Exchange, but persons who came for the express purpose of investing in this propery, and who were not interested in any of the other sales that were going on around them. Four lots on the Boston Road brought $3,000 each; four others on Wesley-place, $1,425 each, and the other lots on First-street, Cliff-street, Woodlawn and Grove-avenue brought proportionate prices.

A very large crowd collected about the stand of Messrs. JOHNSON & MILLER, who were selling the "Kingsland property," consisting of two hundred and fifty lots situate in the Seventeenth Ward, Brooklyn. The bidding was spirited, and the lots all sold well.

The value of Brooklyn property is increasing steadily. The extreme high price at which all lots in the vicinity of the Central Park on the Boulevard are held is driving many of our best citizens to other cities for residences. Lots in the vicinity of Prospect Park may be bought at from two to three thousand dollars, and they are quite as convenient to the business portions of this City as lots at the extreme upper end of the island. Comparatively, Brooklyn lots are much the cheaper, and capitalists are beginning to realize the fact. Property in Flatbush, East New-York and Bay Ridge already feels the inflation of the New-York market, and it is but fair to suppose that they will very soon be brought more prominently in the market, and their value will then rapidly increase.

The sales for to-day embrace several pieces of very valuable improved real estate.

Messrs. A. J. BLEECKER, SON & Co. will sell four lots on the west side of Third-avenue, commencing at One Hundred and Third-street; eight lots on the north side of One Hundred and Third-street, and west of Third-avenue. These lots are very nicely located, and will sell well. Also four lots on Seventh-avenue, northeast corner of One Hundred and Twenty-seventh-street, (Boulevard;) three lots on One Hundred and Twenty-seventh-street, immediately in the rear of the above; one on One Hundred and Eleventh-street, east of Fifth-avenue, and four lots in Washington-street.

Mr. JAMES M. MILLER will sell the three lots of ground, with the improvements, Nos. 100, 102 and 104 Duane-street, south side, commencing 130 feet.

Messrs. E. H. LUDLOW & Co. will sell the four-story brick store and lot No. 19 South William-street, running through to Nos. 49 and 51 Stone-street; the four-story brick store No. 45 Pearl-street, running through to No. 32 Bridge-street, and the store and lot No. 37 South William-street, running through to No. 31 Stone-street.

Messrs. A. H. MULLER, P. R. WILKINS & Co. have an executors' sale of property on Twenty-eighth, Thirty-sixth, Fifty-seventh and Seventy-sixth streets, Avenues A and D, and the property now occupied as a hotel, situate on the southeast corner of Broadway and Twenty-first-street.

Messrs. JOHNSON & MILLER will sell 100 lots, including water-front on the "Delaplaine Estate," Eighth Ward, Brooklyn. These lots are situated on the Second-avenue, Thirty-eighth and Thirty-ninth streets, and the block bounded by Forty-first and Forty-second streets and Seventh and Eighth avenues, and are in the immediate neighborhood of the proposed new ferry from the Battery to Green Wood Cemetery.

The sales for Friday are not very large. Messrs. A. H. MULLER, P. R. WILKINS & Co. will offer property on Vanderbilt-avenue, Brooklyn, between Myrtle and Park avenues; also, on Twenty-seventh-street, East Tenth-street and Rutgers-place, New-York. On Monday they will offer fifty-four lots on the Boulevard, Eleventh-avenue, Seventy-third and Seventy-fourth streets, near the Riverside Park, when another very large crowd will undoubtedly attend, and the prices brought be probably even greater than at any previous sale.

Item 1. 41,288 cubic feet, or as much as may be required, crib framing, planking, bolting, &c., (below water work,) to be bid and paid for by the cubic foot.

Item 2. 24,630 cubic feet, or as much as may be required, framing, planking, bolting, &c., in superstructure, to be bid and paid for by the cubic foot.

Item 3. 1,627 cords, (128 cubic feet,) or as much as may be required, of stone, to be furnished and put in the work; to be bid and paid for by the cord.

Item 4. Removal of material (soft deposits, bowlders, old timber, and other rubbish) necessary in forming junction with old structure, and preparing foundation areas for cribs; to be bid and paid for by the cubic yard.

All the above to be let by class.

Bids for items of a class without covering all the items of a class will be rejected.

A guaranty by two persons or parties must accompany each bid, that the bid shall be made good; and the sufficiency of the guarantors must be certified by a United States District-Attorney, Collector of Customs, or other officer of the United States Government, or responsible person known to this office.

Bonds for the faithful performance of the contract will be executed in each case in sums to be fixed by the undersigned, and no bondsman will be accepted whose sufficiency is not proven to the satisfaction of the undersigned.

Contracts to be signed and bonds executed at 12 M., April 1, 1869.

Iron to be all delivered and labor commenced by the first of May, 1869.

Prior to be finished by the 1st of December, 1869.

All further necessary information may be obtained as to class B by personal application at this office, between the hours of 11 A. M. and 2 P. M. until the 23d day of March, 1869; and as to class A, either by personal application, or by mail for a copy of the specifications.

Bids and guaranties must be submitted on blanks furnished from this office on application; and each bidder must submit with the bid the names of the two bondsmen he intends to use, with evidence, satisfactory to the undersigned, of their sufficiency.

D. D. MCALISTER,
Brevet Brigadier-General,
Major of Engineers.

PROPOSALS FOR ENGRAVINGS OF THE ILLUSTRATIONS ACCOMPANYING THE REPORT OF THE COMMISSIONER OF PATENTS FOR THE YEAR 1869.

OFFICE CONGRESSIONAL PRINTER, WASHINGTON, Feb. 12, 1869.

SEALED PROPOSALS will be received at this Office until March 16, 1869, at 10 o'clock, for furnishing one set of electrotype pages of the ILLUSTRATIONS OF MACHINERY, &c., accompanying the Report of the Commissioner of Patents for the year 1868, with the name of the patentee and the character of the patent on each illustration, or for otherwise furnishing illustrations for that report.

The drawings will be furnished on paper to the contractor, who must arrange them into pages in numerical order, as nearly as is consistent with neatness and compactness. The work is to be delivered at this office free of cost for transportation, and subject to the approval or rejection of the Congressional Printer.

The Joint Committee of Congress on Public Printing would prefer to have the work equal to the illustrations for the Patent Office Reports of 1867, in accordance with the standard heretofore adopted by them, and they invite proposals for that quality of work, but a desire to reduce the expense of this branch of the public printing prompts them to also invite proposals for electrotype plates of an inferior style of workmanship; and also for furnishing the illustrations by engraving, lithography or any other process.

The award will be made "to the lowest and best bidder for the interest of the Government, due regard being paid to the execution of the work," under the direction of the Joint Committee on Printing, who reserve the right to reject any or all of the bids.

Bidders must procure from the Congressional Printer drawings of illustrations sufficient in number to form a page, and must accompany their bids with a specimen of their work, with a sworn statement that it was executed by the establishment of the bidder, and that he possesses the necessary facilities for the prompt and proper execution of the work. If the bid is for supplying electrotype-plate pages, one of those pages must be furnished, that it may be subjected to practical tests.

Bidders are required to propose for the work by the illustration, with the understanding that, when more than one figure is required to illustrate an invention or design, (as is sometimes the case,) the whole number of figures will be estimated and paid for as a single illustration.

No proposal will be considered unless accompanied by a bond with security, to the approval of a United States Judge or District-Attorney, in the penalty of $10,000, that the bidder or bidders, if his or their proposal shall be accepted, will execute the work in accordance with the proposal.

The number of illustrations will be about the same as in the last published volume.

Any further information that may be required will be furnished upon application to this office, or to the Commissioner of Patents.

Blank forms will be furnished upon application to the undersigned, and no proposal will be considered which does not conform precisely therewith.

Proposals will be addressed to "The Joint Committee on Printing," Washington, D. C., care of Hon. H. B. Anthony, U. S. Senate; Hon. A. B. Lafin, House of Representatives; or the undersigned, and indorsed on the envelope "Proposals for Patent Office Report."

JOHN D. DEFREES,
Congressional Printer.

SEALED PROPOSALS

Will be received by the Committee on Normal Schools at the office of the Clerk of the Board of Education, corner of Grand and Elm sts., until WEDNESDAY, the 17th day of March, 1869, and until 3 o'clock P. M. on said day, for the erection of a new school building on the north side on West 61st-st., near Broadway. Plans and specifications can be seen at the office of the Superintendent of Buildings and Repairs, No. 146 Grand-st., third floor.

Proposals must state the estimate for each branch of the work separately, and be indorsed "Proposal for Mason Work," "Proposal for Carpenter Work," "Proposal for Painting," "Proposal for Heating."

Two responsible and approved sureties will be required from each successful bidder, and no proposal will be considered in which no sureties are named. The Committee reserve the right to reject any or all of the proposals offered, if deemed for the public interest to do so.

WILLIAM H. NEILSON,
WILSON SMALL,
RICHARD WARREN,
SAMUEL A. LEWIS,
BENJAMIN B. MERRILL,

PRESIDENT JOHNSON.

Record of the Principal Events of His Administration.

His Conflict with Congress, Impeachment and Trial.

Farewell Address to the People of the United States.

His Own Policy Defended and Congress Violently Assailed.

At the Baltimore Republican Convention of June 7, 1864, ANDREW JOHNSON, a life-long Southern Democrat who had evinced a tendency to affiliate with the Republicans only by his violent opposition to secessionism, was nominated expressly as a candidate of convenience; it was urged and believed that his selection would lead to the firm union of the War Democracy, which he represented, with the Republican Party. This convenient candidate has proved a most inconvenient one; and in every sense a most unsuccessful one. After four years of a bitter contest with the party that thus nominated him, and a fruitless attempt to revive the dead party with which he had always been associated, Mr. JOHNSON leaves the Presidential office without any party at all, and it is difficult to tell whom he has most harmed, his friends or his enemies.

In the following paragraphs we propose to give, without unnecessary comment, a brief history of the more important points of his Administration.

REPUDIATION OF GEN. SHERMAN'S AGREEMENT.

The oath of office was administered to Mr. JOHNSON, as President, on April 15, 1865, a few minutes after the death of Mr. LINCOLN. One of his first important acts was the repudiation of the basis of agreement entered into by Gen. SHERMAN with the rebel Gen. JOE JOHNSTON, for the surrender of the army under his command. The agreement was repudiated for the reasons that it was an exercise of authority not vested in Gen. SHERMAN; it was practically an acknowledgment of the rebel Government; it undertook to reëstablish the State Governments as they existed during the rebellion, and leaving the questions of slavery and the validity of the new loyal State Governments in the South to be settled by the Southern people; it permitted the rebel States to retain the arms with which the rebel armies were armed in their respective capitals; it practically abolished the Confiscation laws, and it granted terms which had been repeatedly rejected by President LINCOLN. Gen. SHERMAN was ordered to terminate his truce with JOHNSTON at once, and the latter then surrendered on the terms granted to LEE. The war was practically ended by this surrender—that of KIRBY SMITH, beyond the Mississippi River, following as a consequence in a short time.

THE LINCOLN ASSASSINS.

Eight of BOOTH'S confederates in the assassination conspiracy were arrested within a few days after Mr. JOHNSON'S ascension, and their trial by Military Commission was at once proceeded with. The sentences were approved by President JOHNSON on July 6. On the next day PAYNE, HAROLD, ATZERODT and Mrs. SURRATT were executed. The others were sentenced to hard labor, for various terms, in military and other prisons. One of them, Dr. SAMUEL MUDD, has since been pardoned by Mr. JOHNSON. JOHN H. SURRATT escaped to Europe, but was subsequently arrested and brought to this country, tried, but not convicted, and was finally released on bail.

RECONSTRUCTION.

Mr. JOHNSON early began the work of the political reconstruction of the rebel States, not waiting for the assembling of Congress, or calling that body together to sanction the measures adopted. On May 29 he issued a proclamation, establishing a Provisional Government for North Carolina. It appointed W. W. HOLDEN, a noted loyalist, Provisional Governor; ordered a Constitutional Convention, to be composed of loyal men, elected only by those who had taken the amnesty oath, or had never engaged in rebellion, and denied suffrage to the freedmen, leaving the question of suffrage to be decided by the States. By the 13th of July, 1865, similar Provisional Governments were established in Mississippi, Georgia, Texas, Alabama, Florida and South Carolina. Some of the Governors thus appointed soon displayed a disposition to court the old power which had formerly ruled, Gov. PERRY, of South Carolina, among others, retaining in their positions all the officers of the State as under the rebel administration. The Constitutional Conventions of the several States met in August and September, and although they performed the duties set for them in repealing the secession ordinances and declaring slavery forever abolished, they evinced a decided spirit of adherence to the old doctrines and the old leaders, whose influence and power it was hoped the war had destroyed. The elections of State officers and members followed as provided by the Conventions; and when Congress was ready to assemble in December, 1865, it was found that the States reconstructed under Mr. JOHNSON'S policy and supervision had sent as members elect only old leaders who had been prominent in the rebellion. Few of them could take the oath required by the act of July, 1862, to the effect that they had never borne arms against the United States, or given aid to the rebels; one of them had been the Vice-President of the Southern Confederacy, and many of them had been General officers in its army. Mr. JOHNSON had hastened reconstruction, evidently with the hope that the men then elected would be admitted without opposition on the opening of Congress in December, 1865, thus at once restoring them to their former legislative powers. This hope, and the fears of the Republican members, were dissipated by Mr. MCPHERSON, Clerk of the House, who in calling the roll and organizing the House, omitted the names of the reconstructed States. The claims of the Southern members elect were at once disallowed, and a Reconstruction Committee was appointed to inquire into the condition of the Southern States. From this time forward the opposition to Mr. JOHNSON'S policy was strongly developed, and Congress advancing a scheme of its own, that of Mr. JOHNSON failed. He, however, persisted in declaring that the States reconstructed by him were "entitled to enjoy their constitutional rights as members of the Union;" and that while he "shared with Congress the strongest desire to secure to the freedmen the full enjoyment of their freedom and property and their independence and equality in making contracts for their labor," he opposed the giving the right of suffrage to the freedmen or the apportionment of Southern representation to the number of qualified voters. This policy he persisted in pursuing to the bitter end.

In pursuance of its own scheme of reconstruction, Congress, early in 1866, passed a bill enlarging the powers of the Freedmen's Bureau, and later a joint resolution declaring that no Senator or Representative from the eleven insurrectionary States should be admitted into either House of Congress until Congress, and not the President, shall have declared such State entitled to representation. In March the Civil Rights bill, conferring citizenship on the freedmen and providing for their protection by the National Courts and officers, was passed, with little difficulty, over the President's veto, and from that time forward the opposition to him was thoroughly organized. Congress in the quiet pursuance of its own scheme of reconstruction passed (June 8, 1866, in the House, and June 13 in the Senate,) the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution, extending citizenship to all persons born or naturalized in the United States; forbidding the abridgement of their rights by any State, apportioning representation according to the population in States where all citizens are allowed to vote, and according to the voters in all other States, and declaring the validity of the public debt and the illegality of all claims for debts of any States incurred in aiding the rebellion. Reconstruction acts were passed March 2, 1867, and (supplementary) March 23, July 19, 1867, and March 11, 1868, providing for the government of the rebel States in their transitory state. In the meantime the former action of the States had been annulled, new Constitutions had been adopted and the majority of them have up to the present time been provided with State Governments and admitted to representation in both Houses of Congress. Arkansas was admitted by an act passed over the President's veto, on June 20, 1868, in the House, and June 22 in the Senate. Three days after, a like act, restoring North Carolina, South Carolina, Louisiana, Georgia, Alabama and Florida was passed over the President's veto. Virginia, Mississippi and Texas, having by vote rejected the Constitutions framed in accordance with the acts of Congress, remain excluded from representation.

THE NEW-ORLEANS MASSACRE.

The most painful and bloody episode of the reconstruction contest was the New-Orleans riot of July 30, 1866. The old Convention of 1864 called during the war and while Gen. BANKS was in command in the State, was called by the Vice-President of that body to reassemble for the purpose of framing a new State Constitution. When it met, however, the civil authorities of New-Orleans under the lead of Mayor MUNROE, who had been dismissed from his office by Gen. BUTLER on the capture of the city in 1862, attempted to disperse the members, and an affray occurred in which about thirty negroes and three white men were murdered by the mob. Gen. ABSALOM BAIRD, Commissioner of the Freedmen's Bureau in Louisiana, who was in temporary command of the city during Gen. SHERIDAN'S absence in Texas, immediately declared martial law and released the members of the Convention who had been arrested by Mayor MUNROE'S Police. The Mayor protested against this and appealed by telegraph to President JOHNSON, who in response assured the Attorney-General of the State that the military would not be supported in their usurpation of authority in declaring martial law. The Congressional Committee appointed to investigate the riot reported that the number of persons known to have been killed was 38, of whom 37 were loyal and 34 colored; while of the 146 wounded, all but ten were loyal men. The report characterized the riot as a brutal and wanton attack set on foot by disloyal persons.

"SWINGING ROUND THE CIRCLE."

On Aug. 28, 1866, the President, accompanied by Secretary SEWARD and other members of the Cabinet, Gen. GRANT and Admiral FARRAGUT, left Washington on a tour to Chicago, to attend the laying of the corner-stone of a monument to STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS. Unfortunately, before proceeding far, the demonstrations both on the part of the people and of Mr. JOHNSON took a political form, and throughout the whole route, going and returning, unseemly exhibitions of intemperate speeches and rude insults were witnessed, and, fully detailed, were published all over the country. The speeches of Mr. JOHNSON were generally violent denunciations of Congress, and individual members of that body; not unfrequently he condescended to reply to taunting remarks made by individuals in the crowd. The city authorities of one or two cities refused to tender the hospitalities of the city to the President and those in his party. At Indianapolis, Ind., a riot occurred during the time the President was speaking, and one man was killed and several wounded. It was charged that the political purpose of this tour was to affect the elections which were to follow in October, but if such design was entertained the demonstrations did not result as hoped for. The elections of October, 1866, were carried by the Republicans by increased majorities. On the reassembling of Congress in December, 1866, it was found that the party was strengthened, and its first acts indicated that its previously adopted policy of reconstruction would not be in any wise moderated or changed.

THE MEXICAN QUESTION.

The invasion of Mexico by the French in 1862, was undertaken under the belief that the disruption of the United States was inevitable, and that neither of the two separated parts would have the power to enforce the Monroe Doctrine against the foreign Prince whom NAPOLEON intended to establish there. It became evident on the suppression of the rebellion, that the Empire in Mexico must fall with it; and one of the first acts of Mr. SEWARD, who had during the whole war openly expressed his doubts as to the sincerity of NAPOLEON'S declarations that he merely proposed to collect the debt due France, was to demand the withdrawal of the French as soon as possible. In response, the French Government fixed a date—November, 1866—but failing to keep its promise, Minister CAMPBELL and Gen. SHERMAN were dispatched to Mexico to hurry up the evacuation, and Mr. SEWARD wrote to Mr. DAYTON at Paris as follows: "You will inform the Emperor's Government that the President desires and sincerely hopes that the evacuation of Mexico will be accomplished in conformity with the existing arrangement, so far as the inopportune complication necessitating this dispatch will permit. On this point Mr CAMPBELL will receive instructions. Instructions will also be sent to the military forces of the United States, which are placed in a post of observation, and are waiting the special orders of the President, and this will be done with confidence, that the telegraph or the courier will bring us intelligence of a satisfactory resolution on the part of the Emperor in reply to this note." This threat had its desired effect, and the evacuation of the French at once took place, February, 1867.

MAXIMILLIAN remained, and with a force of Germans and Mexicans attempted to maintain his Empire. But he was surrounded and besieged in Queretero in the following March, and on being captured was executed. The French invasion was thus brought to an unsuccessful conclusion.

THE FENIAN DEMONSTRATIONS.

During April, May and June, 1866, the Fenian organizations in various parts of the country made demonstrations against Canada. In April a few hundred Fenians appeared at Eastport, Me., and subsequently other points were threatened. In June a considerable body crossed the border at Buffalo, and several considerable skirmishes took place. The President promptly issued, June 6, a proclamation denouncing the enterprise as a violation of the neutrality laws, and directing Gen. MEADE, Commander of the Department of the East, to quell the uprising, which he did by the judicious measures of seizing arms and ammunition, and arresting the officers of the Fenian army.

AMNESTIES.

During his administration Mr. JOHNSON, as he has frequently boasted, has largely exercised his prerogative of pardon, and has issued a number of amnesty proclamations. On May 29, 1865, he issued his first amnesty, pardoning the vast majority of those engaged in the rebellion, but holding certain classes amenable to prosecution for their offences. Large numbers of these, however, were pardoned by special order of the President in each case. So largely and to all appearance so indiscriminately was the power of pardon exercised in this way, that Congress repealed the privilege of pardon by wholesale. Nevertheless, the President proclaimed, Sept. 7, 1867, a full pardon to more of those exempted in the first amnesty; and July 4, 1868, issued a general amnesty, pardoning all not then under indictment for treason. On Feb. 22, 1869, he completed this work by pardoning these, even including JEFF. DAVIS, BRECKENRIDGE, &c., who are restored to their rights and privileges, and all property not slaves or confiscated to the Government.

IMPEACHMENT.

Notwithstanding the expressed will of the people in favor of the reconstruction views of Congress, the President continued at every opportunity to bring his veto to bear against all the measures of Congress, looking to such reconstruction. The bills permitting negro suffrage in the District of Columbia, admitting Colorado and Nebraska as States under certain conditions; regulating the franchise in the Territories, and others of similar purport, were all vetoed, and this continued opposition led the House to institute measures for his impeachment. The disloyal tendency in the South was so aggravated by this encouragement from an unexpected quarter, that even stronger reconstruction measures became necessary. Mr. STEVENS reported a bill from the Reconstruction Committee to establish Military Governments in the South, and the Tenure-of-Office bill, restricting the authority of the President to remove his Cabinet officers, or any others during a recess of Congress, or without the consent of the Senate, was passed in both Houses over the veto. On the 7th of January, 1867, Mr. ASHLEY, in the House, offered a resolution charging "ANDREW JOHNSON, Vice-President and Acting President, with the commission of acts which in the estimation of the Constitution are high crimes and misdemeanors," for which he ought to be impeached. This resolution was agreed to by a vote of 107 to 38. A resolution to the same effect was also offered the same day by Mr. KELSO, of Missouri. On the 4th of March the Fortieth Congress convened, and Senator BEN. WADE, of Ohio, was elected President of the Senate. In the meantime differences had arisen between the President and Mr. STANTON, Secretary of War, and the former was very much dissatisfied with the action of Gens. SHERIDAN and SICKLES, commanding respectively the Military Districts of Louisiana and South Carolina. On the 5th of August the President directed Mr. STANTON to send in his resignation. This Mr. STANTON declined to do. On the 12th Gen. GRANT, at the President's request, assumed the duties of Acting Secretary of War, Mr. STANTON giving up the office under protest. On the 17th inst. the President directed the removal of Gen. SHERIDAN, and submitted the proposition to Gen. GRANT, who strongly protested, and urged that the Reconstruction laws gave him (GRANT) alone the right to change the military commanders. However, on the 26th, the order was issued direct from Gen. GRANT'S headquarters, and also one removing Gen. SICKLES. Congress reassembled in November, and the report of the Judiciary Committee of the House, favoring impeachment, was read and rejected by a vote of 57 to 108. The President sent in a message to the Senate early in December, giving his reasons for the suspension of Secretary STANTON. On the 13th of January, 1868, the Senate refused to concur in the suspension by a vote of 35 to 10, and Mr. STANTON immediately resumed his functions, Gen. GRANT vacating in his favor. Out of this action of Gen. GRANT'S grew a long correspondence between him and the President, which resulted in a bitter quarrel, and, in view of it, Mr. STEVENS, in the House Committee, again broached the subject of impeachment. It was, however, laid on the table.

On the 21st of February, Congress being at the time in session, the President issued a peremptory order removing Mr. STANTON, and appointing Adjt.-Gen. LORENZO THOMAS Secretary of War ad interim. Mr. STANTON, however, refused to give up the office and fortified himself within its doors. On the next day a resolution for the impeachment of the President was passed in the House by a vote of 126 to 47. A Committee of Seven to conduct the proceedings was appointed, and the action was formally announced to the Senate. The articles charged the President with conspiracy, unlawful removals and appointments, attempting to subvert the rightful authority of Congress, and with making intemperate harangues before the people. After the settlement of some preliminaries, the Senate was organized as a High Court of Impeachment on the 5th of March. On the 23d the President appeared by counsel and presented his answer to the impeachment. The next day the House Managers of the Impeachment made their replication, reaffirming the charges.

The trial accordingly was commenced on the 30th of March, Chief Justice CHASE presiding, Mr. BUTLER, of the Managers, chiefly conducting the prosecution, and Mr. STANBERY, Attorney-General, Messrs. EVARTS, GROESBECK, NELSON, and CURTIS appearing for the President. Among the witnesses who were examined were Gen. GRANT, Gen. SHERMAN, Adjt.-Gen. THOMAS, and numerous others of less note. The closing arguments commenced on April 22 and lasted until May 6. Several days' deliberation then took place with closed doors, and on May 16 the first vote was taken. It was on the eleventh article, and resulted in thirty-five for conviction and nineteen against, one vote short of the two-thirds majority required to convict. The seven Republicans who voted for acquittal were FESSENDEN, FOWLER, GRIMES, HENDERSON, ROSS, TRUMBULL, and VAN WINKLE. Two more of the articles having been voted upon with the same result, the High Court of Impeachment adjourned sine die on the 26th of May. Mr. STANTON immediately vacated the War Office, turning over the property to Adjt-Gen. TOWNSEND.

THE PURCHASE OF FOREIGN TERRITORY.

A treaty was concluded by the State Department with the Russian Government, on the 29th of March, 1867, by which all the Russian possessions in North America were ceded to the Government for the sum of $7,000,000. The Senate ratified this treaty on the 9th of April, and early in October the new territory was formally taken possession of by Gen. ROUSSEAU, as agent of the Government. A similar treaty was also concluded with Denmark, for the purchase of the Island of St. Thomas, but it has not been ratified by the Senate, and the House has evinced a disposition to refuse the necessary appropriation.

THE PRESIDENTIAL NOMINATIONS.

The Republican Convention to nominate candidates for the Presidency and Vice-Presidency, met in Chicago on the 20th of May, and unanimously nominated Gen. ULYSSES S. GRANT for President. After six ballots were taken SCHUYLER COLFAX, Speaker of the House of Representatives, was nominated for Vice-President.

The Democratic National Convention met at Tammany Hall, New-York, on the 4th of July. President Johnson had intimated in a letter to a friend that he would accept the nomination, provided it was made as an indorsement of his course, but he only received a complimentary vote of 65. Several days were consumed in balloting, but without success, and finally, on the 9th of July, HORATIO SEYMOUR, the Chairman of the Convention, who had thrice declined, was nominated almost by acclamation. FRANCIS P. BLAIR, Jr., was then nominated for Vice-President. The elections took place on the 6th of November, and the electoral vote being counted in joint session of Congress on the 11th of February, disclosed the fact that GRANT and COLFAX were elected by 212 votes against 80 for SEYMOUR and BLAIR.

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

WASHINGTON, March 3, 1869.

To the People of the United States:

The robe of office by constitutional limitation this day falls from my shoulders, to be immediately assumed by my successor. For him the forbearance and coöperation of the American people, in all his efforts to administer the Government within the pale of the Federal Constitution, are sincerely invoked. Without ambition to gratify, party ends to subserve, or personal quarrels to avenge, at the sacrifice of the peace and welfare of the country, my earnest desire is to see the Constitution of the Republic again recognized and obeyed as the supreme law of the land, and the whole people, North, South, East and West, prosperous and happy under its wise provisions.

In surrendering the high office to which I was called four years ago, at a memorable and terrible crisis, it is my privilege, I trust, to say to the people of the United States a few parting words in vindication of an official course so ceaselessly assailed and aspersed by political leaders, to whose plans and wishes my policy to restore the Union has been obnoxious. In a period of difficulty and turmoil almost without precedent in the history of any people, consequent upon the closing scenes of a great rebellion and the assassination of the then President, it was perhaps too much on my part to expect of devoted partisans who rode on the waves of excitement, which at that time swept all before them, that degree of toleration and magnanimity which I sought to recommend and enforce and which I believe in good time would have advanced us infinitely further on the road to permanent peace and prosperity than we have thus far attained. Doubtless had I, at the commencement of my term of office, unhesitatingly lent its powers, or perverted them to purposes and plans outside of the Constitution, and become an instrument to schemes of confiscation and of general and oppressive disqualification, I would have been hailed as all that was true, loyal and discerning, as the reliable head of a party, whatever I might have been as the Executive of a nation. Unwilling, however, to accede to propositions of extremists, and bound to obey at every personal hazard my oath to defend the Constitution, I need not perhaps be surprised at having met the fate of others whose only rewards for upholding constitutional rights and laws have been the consciousness of having attempted to do their duty, and the calm judgment of history. At the time a mysterious Providence assigned to me the office of President, I was, by the terms of the Constitution, the Commander-in-Chief of nearly a million of men under arms. One of my first acts was to disband and restore to the vocations of civil life this immense host, and to divest myself so far as I could of the unparalleled powers then incident to the office and the times. Whether or not in this step I was right, and how far deserving of the approbation of all the people, all can now on reflection judge, when reminded of the ruinous condition of public affairs that must have resulted from the continuance in the military service of such a vast number of men. The close of our domestic conflict found the army under the command of a general who had conducted a foreign war, in which both sides would cheerfully unite to vindicate the honor of the national flag and further illustrate the national prowess, would be the surest and speediest way of awakening national enthusiasm, reviving devotion to the Union and occupying a force concerning which grave doubts existed as to its willingness, after four years of active campaigning, at once to return to the pursuits of peace. Whether these speculations were true or false, it will be conceded that they existed, and that the predilections of the army were for the time being in the direction indicated. Taking advantage of that feeling it would have been easy, as the Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy, and with all the power and patronage of the Presidential office at my disposal, to turn the concentrated strength of the nation against French interference in Mexico, and to inaugurate a movement which would have been received with favor by the military and a large portion of the people. It is proper in this connection that I should refer to the almost unlimited additional powers tendered to the Executive by the measures relating to Civil Rights and the Freedmen's Bureau, contrary to most precedents in the experience of public men. The powers thus placed within my grasp were declined as being in violation of the Constitution, dangerous to the liberties of the people, and tending to aggravate rather than lessen the discords naturally resulting from our civil war. With a large army and augmented authority, it would have been no difficult task to direct as pleasure the destinies of the Republic, and to make secure my continuance in the highest office known to our laws. Let the people, whom I am addressing from the Presidential chair during the closing hours of a laborious term, consider how different would have been their present condition had I yielded to the dazzling temptation of foreign conquest, of personal aggrandizement and the desire to wield additional power. Let them with justice consider that if I have not unduly magnified mine office, the public burdens have not been increased by my acts, and perhaps thousands or tens of thousands of lives sacrificed to visions of false glory. It cannot, therefore, be charged that my ambition has been of that ordinary or criminal kind which to the detriment of the people's rights and liberties ever seeks to grasp more and unwarranted powers, and to accomplish its purposes panders too often to popular prejudice and party aims. What, then, have been the aspirations which guided me in my official acts? Those acts need not at this time an elaborate explanation. They have elsewhere been comprehensively stated and fully discussed, and become a part of the nation's history. By them I am ready to be judged, knowing that, however imperfect, they at least show to the impartial mind that my sole ambition has been to restore the Union of the States, faithfully to execute the office of President, and to the best of my ability to preserve, protect and defend the Constitution. I cannot be censured if my efforts have been impeded in the interests of party faction, and if a policy, which was intended to reassure and conciliate the people of both sections of the country, was made the occasion of inflaming and dividing still further those who, only recently in arms against each other, yet as individuals and citizens were sincerely desirous, as I shall ever believe, of burying all hostile feelings in the grave of the past. The bitter war was waged on the part of the Government to vindicate the Constitution and save the Union; and if I have erred in trying to bring about a more speedy and lasting peace to extinguish heartburnings and enmities, and to prevent trouble in the South, which, retarding material prosperity in that region, injuriously affected the whole country, I am quite content to rest my case with the more deliberate judgment of the people, and, as I have already intimated, with the distant future. The war, all must remember, was a stupendous and disastrous mistake. Neither side understood the other, and had this simple fact and its conclusions been kept in view, all that was needed was accomplished by the acknowledgement of the terrible wrong, and the expression of better feeling and earnest endeavor at atonement shown and felt. In the prompt ratification of Constitutional amendments by the Southern States at the close of the war, not accepting the war as a confessed false step on the part of those who inaugurated it, was an error which now only time can cure, and which, even at this late date, we should endeavor to palliate, experiencing, moreover, as all have done, the frightful cost of the arbitrament of the sword. Let us in the future cling closer than ever to the Constitution as our only safeguard. It is to be hoped that not until the the burdens now pressing upon us with such fearful weight are removed will our people forget the lessons of the war, and that, remembering them from whatever cause, peace between sections and States may be perpetual. The history of late events in our country, as well as of the greatest Governments of ancient and modern times, teach that we have everything to fear from a departure from the letter and spirit of the Constitution, and the undue ascendency of men allowed to assume power in what are considered desperate emergencies. SYLLA, on becoming master of Rome, at once adopted measures to crush his enemies and to consolidate the power of his party. He established military colonies throughout Italy, deprived of the full Roman franchise the inhabitants of the Italian towns who had opposed his usurpation, confiscated their lands and gave them to his soldiers, and conferred citizenship upon a great number of slaves belonging to those who had proscribed him, thus creating at Rome a kind of body-guard for his protection. After having given Rome over to slaughter, and tyrannized beyond all example over those opposed to him and the legions, his terrible instrument of wrong, SYLLA could yet feel safe in laoing down the ensigns of power so dreadfully abused, and in mingling freely with the families and friends of his myriad victims. The fear which he had inspired continued after his voluntary abdication, and even in retirement his will was law to a people who had permitted themselves to be enslaved. What but a subtle knowledge and conviction that the Roman people had become changed, discouraged, and utterly broken in spirit could have induced this daring assumption? What but public indifference to consequences so terrible as to leave Rome open to every calamity, which subsequently befel her, could have justified the conclusions of the Dictator and tyrant in his startling experiment? We find that in the time which has since elapsed human nature and exigencies in Governments have not greatly changed. Who, a few years hence, in contemplating our future, could have supposed that in a brief period of bitter experience, every thing demanded in the name of military emergency, or dictated by caprice would come to be considered as mere matters of course. That conscription, confiscation, loss of personal liberty, the subjugation of States to military rule, and disfranchisement, with the extension of the right of suffrage merely to accomplish party ends, would receive the passive submission, if not acquiescence, of the people of the Republic. It has been clearly demonstrated by recent occurrences that encroachments upon the Constitution cannot be prevented by the President, however devoted or determined he may be. That unless the people interpose there is no power under the Constitution to check a dominant majority of two-thirds of the Congress of the United States. An appeal to the nation is attended with too much delay to meet emergency; while if left free to act, the people would correct in time such evils as might follow legislative usurpation. There is danger that the same power which disregards the Constitution will deprive them of the right to change their rulers except by revolution. Let me add, already the jurisdiction of the Judiciary circumscribed when it was apprehended that the Courts would decide against laws having for their sole object the supremacy of party, while the veto power lodged in the Executive by the Constitution for the interest and protection of the people, and exercised by WASHINGTON and his successors, has been rendered nugatory by a partisan majority of two-thirds in each branch of the National Legislature. The Constitution evidently contemplates that when a bill is returned with the President's objections, it will be calmly reconsidered by Congress. Such, however, has not been the practice under the present party rule. It has become evident that men who pass a bill under partisan influences are not likely, through patriotic motives, to admit their error, and thereby weaken their own organizations by solemnly confessing it under the official oath. Pride of opinion, if nothing else, has intervened and prevented a calm and dispassionate reconsideration of a bill disapproved by the Executive. Much as I venerate the Constitution, it must be admitted that this condition of affairs has developed a defect which, under the aggressive tendency of the Legislative Department of the Government, may readily work its overthrow. It may, however, be remedied without disturbing the harmony of the instrument. The veto power is generally exercised upon constitutional grounds, and whenever it is so applied, and the bill returned with the Executive's reasons for withholding his signature, it ought to be immediately certified to the Supreme Court of the United States for its decision. If its constitutionality shall be declared by that tribunal it should then become a law. But if the decision is otherwise, it should fall without power in Congress to reënact and make it valid. In cases in which the veto rests upon hasty and inconsiderate legislation, and in which no constitutional question is involved, I would not change the fundamental law; for, in such cases no permanent evil can be incorporated into the Federal system. It is obvious that without such an amendment the Government, as it existed under the Constitution prior to the rebellion, may be wholly subverted and overthrown by a two-thirds majority in Congress. It is not, therefore, difficult to see how easily and how rapidly the people may lose (shall I not say have lost?) their liberties by an unchecked and uncontrollable majority in the law-making power; and, whenever deprived of their rights, how powerless they are to regain them? Let us turn for a moment to the history of the majority in Congress, which has acted in such utter disregard of the Constitution, while public attention has been carefully and constantly turned to the past and expiated sins of the South, and the servants of the people in high places have boldly betrayed their trust, broken their oaths of obedience to the Constitution, and undermined the very foundations of liberty, justice and good government. When the rebellion was being suppressed by the volunteered services of patriot soldiers, amid the dangers of the battle-field, these men crept, without question, into place and power in the national councils. After all dangers had passed, when no armed foe remained—when a penitent people bowed their heads to the flag, and renewed their allegiance to the Government of United States, then it was that pretended patriots appeared before the nation and began to prate about the thousands of lives and millions of treasure sacrificed in the suppression of the rebellion. They have since persistently sought to inflame the prejudices engendered between the sections, to retard the restoration of peace and harmony, and by every means to keep open and exposed to the poisonous breath of party passion the terrible wounds of a four years' war. They have prevented the return of peace, and the restoration of the Union; in every way rendered delusive the purposes, promises and pledges by which the army was marshaled, treason rebuked and rebellion crushed; and made the liberties of the people, and the rights and powers of the President, objects of constant attack. They have wrested from the President his constitutional power of supreme command of the army and navy; they have destroyed the strength and efficiency of the Executive Department by making subordinate officers independent of and able to defy their chief; they have attempted to place the President under the power of a bold, defiant and treacherous Cabinet officer; they have robbed the Executive of the prerogative of pardon, rendered null and void acts of clemency granted to thousands of persons under the provisions of the Constitution, and committed gross usurpation by legislative attempts to exercise this power in favor of party adherents; they have conspired to change the system of our Government by preferring charges against the President in the form of articles of impeachment, and contemplating before hearing or trial that he should be placed in arrest, held in durance, and when it became their pleasure to pronounce his sentence, driven from place and power in disgrace; they have in time of peace increased the National debt by a reckless expenditure of the public moneys, and thus added to the burdens which already weigh upon the people; they have permitted the nation to suffer the evils of a deranged currency to the enhancement in price of all the necessaries of life; they have maintained a large standing army for the enforcement of their measures of oppression; they have engaged in class legislation and built up and encouraged monopolies that the few might be enriched at the expense of the many; they have failed to act upon unimportant treaties, thereby endangering our present peaceful relations with foreign Powers. Their course of usurpation has not been limited to inroads upon the Executive Department. By unconstitutional and oppressive enactments the people of ten States of the Union have been reduced to a condition more intolerable than that from which the patriots of the Revolution rebelled. Millions of American citizens can now say of their oppressors, with more truth than our fathers did of British tyrants, that they have "forbidden the Governments to pass laws of immediate and pressing importance, unless suspended until their assent should be obtained;" that they have "refused to pass other laws for the accommodation of large districts of people, unless those people would relinquish the right of representation in the Legislature, a right inestimable to them and formidable to tyrants only;" that they have "made judges dependent upon their will alone for the tenure of their offices and the amount and payment of their salaries;" that they have erected a multitude of new offices and sent further swarms of officers to harass our people and eat out their substance; that they have affected to render the military independent and superior to the civil power; combined with others to subject us to a jurisdiction foreign to our Constitution and unacknowledged by our laws; quartered large bodies of armed troops among us; protected them by a mock trial from punishment for any murders which they should commit on the inhabitants of these States; imposed taxes upon us without our consent; deprived us in many cases of the benefit of trial by jury; taken away our charters; incited domestic insurrection among us; abolished our most valuable laws; altered fundamentally the forms of our Government; suspended our own Legislatures, and declared themselves invested with power to legislate for us in all cases whatsoever.

This catalogue of crimes, long as it is, is not yet complete. The Constitution vests the Judicial power of the United States in one Supreme Court, whose jurisdiction shall extend to all cases arising under the Constitution and the laws of the United States. Encouraged by this promise of a refuge from tyranny, a citizen of the United States, who by the order of a military commander, given under the sanction of a cruel and deliberate edict of Congress, had been denied the constitutional rights of liberty of conscience, freedom of the press and of speech, personal freedom from military arrest, of being held to answer for crime only upon presentment of an indictment, of trial by jury, of the writ of habeas corpus and the protection of a civil and constitutional Government—a citizen thus deeply wronged appeals to the Supreme Court for the protection guaranteed him by the organic law of the land. At once a fierce and excited majority, by the ruthless hand of legislative power, stripped the ermine from the Judges, transferred the sword of justice to the General, and remanded the oppressed citizen to a degradation and bondage worse than death. It will also be recorded as one of the marvels of the times that a party claiming for itself a monopoly of consistency and patriotism, and boasting of its unlimited sway, endeavored, by a costly and deliberate trial, to impeach one who defended the Constitution and the Union, not only throughout the war of the rebellion, but during the whole term of office as Chief Magistrate, but, at the same time, could find no warrant or means at their command to bring to trial even the chief of the rebellion. Indeed, the remarkable failures in this case were so often repeated that, for propriety's sake, if for no other reason, it became at last necessary to extend to him an unconditional pardon. What more plainly than this illustrates the extremity of party management and inconsistency on one hand, and of faction, vindictiveness and intolerance on the other. Patriotism will hardly be encouraged when, in such a record, it sees that its instant reward may be most virulent party abuse and obloquy, if not attempted disgrace. Instead of seeking to make treason odious, it would, in truth, seem to have been their purpose rather to make the defence of the Constitution and Union a crime, and to punish fidelity to an oath of office, if counter to party dictation, by all the means at their command.

Happily for the peace of the country, the war has determined against the assumed power of the States to withdraw at pleasure from the Union. The institution of slavery, also, found its destruction in a rebellion commenced in its interest. It should be borne in mind, however, that the war neither impaired nor destroyed the Constitution, but, on the contrary, preserved its existence, and made apparent its real power and enduring strength. All the rights granted to the States or reserved to the people are therefore intact. Among those rights is that of the people of each State to declare the qualifications of their own State electors. It is now assumed that Congress can control this vital right, which can never be taken away from the States without impairing the fundamental principle of the Government itself. It is necessary to the existence of the States as well as to the protection of the liberties of the people; for the right to select the elector in whom the political power of the State shall be lodged, involves the right of the State to govern itself. When deprived of this prerogative, the State will have no power worth retaining. All will be gone, and they will be subjected to the arbitrary will of Congress. The Government will then be centralized, if not by the passage of laws than by the adoption, through partisan influence, of an amendment directly in conflict with the original design of the Constitution. This proves how necessary it is the people should require the administration of the three great departments of the Government to be strictly within the limits of the Constitution. Their boundaries have been accurately defined, and neither should be allowed to trespass on the other; nor, above all, to encroach upon the reserved rights of the people and the States. The troubles of the past four years will prove to the nation blessings, if they produce so desirable a result.

Upon those who become young men amid the sound of cannon and the din of arms, and who quietly returned to the farms, the factories and the schools of the land, will principally devolve the solemn duty of perpetuating the Union of the States, in defence of which hundreds of thousands of their comrades expired, and hundreds of millions of national obligations were incurred. A manly people will not neglect the training necessary to resist agression, but they should be jealous lest the civil be made subordinate to the military element. We need to encourage in every legitimate way a study of the Constitution for which the war was waged; a knowledge of, and reverence for whose wise checks, by those so soon to occupy the places filled by their seniors, will be the only hope of preserving the Republic. The young men of the nation, not yet under the control of party, must resist the tendency to centralization, an outgrowth of the great rebellion, and be familiar with the fact that the country consists of the "United States," and that where the States surrendered certain great rights for the sake of a more perfect union, they retained rights as valuable and important as those they relinquished for the common weal. This sound old doctrine, far different from the teachings that led to the attempt to secede, and a kindred theory, that the States were taken out of the Union by the rash acts of conspirators that happened to dwell within their borders, must be received and advocated with the enthusiasm of early manhood, or the people will be ruled by corrupt combinations of the commercial centres, which, plethoric from wealth, annually migrate to the capital of the nation to purchase special legislation. Until the representatives of the people in Congress more fully exhibit the diverse views, and the interests of the whole nation and laws cease to be made without full discussion as the behest of some party leader, there will never be a proper respect shown by the law-making power either to the Judicial or Executive branch of the Government. The generation just beginning to use the ballot-box, it is believed, only need that their attention should be called to these considerations to indicate by their votes that they wish their representatives to observe all the restraints which the people, in adopting the Constitution, intended to impose on party excess.

Calmly reviewing my administration of the Government, I feel that (with a sense of accountability to God, having conscientiously endeavored to discharge my whole duty,) I have nothing to regret. Events have proved the correctness of the policy set forth in my first and subsequent messages. The woes which have followed the rejection of forbearance, magnanimity and constitutional rule are known and deplored by the nation. It is a matter of pride and gratification, in retiring from the most exalted position in the gift of a free people, to feel and know that in a long, arduous and eventful public life my action has never been influenced by desire for gain, and that I can in all sincerity inquire, whom have I defrauded? Whom have I oppressed? or, at whose hand have I received any bribe to blind my eyes therewith? No responsibility for wars that have been waged or blood that have been shed rests upon me. My thoughts have been those of peace, and my effort has ever been to allay contentions among my countrymen. Forgetting the past, let us return to the first principles of the Government, and unfurling the banner of our country, inscribe upon it the indelible characters "The Constitution and the Union one and inseparable."

ANDREW JOHNSON.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 4, 1869.

A drunken German named TOBIAS STEINER fell late on Wednesday night on the track of the South Bergen Railroad, at the juncture of Hudson and Jersey cities. He was so observed by a horse railroad car driver, too late, however, to save him from injury, for notwithstanding the breaks were put on immediately, two of the wheels passed over the unfortunate man, crushing his right leg and fracturing his left ankle. His wounds were dressed and he was sent home.
